

Speaker 1 [00:00:03]: Just show that it started, then I started, but this one is fine, I will start with some sociodemographic questions before talking about the relationship itself. I want to know how old you are.

Speaker 2 [00:00:21]: I am [30-35] years old.

Speaker 1 [00:00:24]: And how long have you and [Partner's Name] been together?

Speaker 2 [00:00:28]: It will be [6-10] years now, on [Date]. Usually, I respond like this, I don't know when it started or not, but I know it's forever. But since the interview is on [Date], we will be [6-10] years together from then on.

Speaker 1 [00:00:42]: And do you have children? You don't know with whom you live? I know that's it, but I have to ask because...

Speaker 2 [00:00:50]: She has a problem. She lives there, [Partner's Name].

Speaker 1 [00:00:51]: What is your main source of income and your profession?

Speaker 2 [00:00:57]: I am my main source of income, it's my own work. I am an [occupation] at [Company], the [description of company].

Speaker 1 [00:01:08]: And do you think it's okay if I call her [Partner's Name]? Do you want me to call her wife, partner, companion?

Speaker 2 [00:01:15]: Some names you can call her, but it's not a problem, it's more natural.

Speaker 1 [00:01:21]: Yes, I think so too. And then I wanted you to tell me the love story of you two. How did you meet, how did you get together, how was it?

Speaker 2 [00:01:35]: From my part. When we met at work, we worked together at [Company]. She joined the [company] in [Month]. It was a month when I was on vacation and there at the brewery, we used our private phones to be in the [group] of the [company] and such. So, I was on vacation and was also seeing the groups of what was happening at the [company]. Suddenly, I saw that my manager added a person to the group. Then I thought, who is this? I took a look and saw. Then it was interesting. An important point is that I was engaged in a [1-5]-year relationship at that time. The engagement was [11-15] months. And then, okay? I continued my vacation, returned to work. I had participated during a period of my vacation in a corporate technical training at [Company], nationwide. And in that, I got second place due to my performance in this training and analysis. She was going to the area where I worked and then due to this placement of mine, they put her to train with me in the functions. So, I was her mentor in those activities. Nothing unusual until then, let's say. So, she started accompanying me a lot in my routines, I was accompanying her, she also was going through some routines, training. And then a few weeks passed and we changed the training scheme. She started taking the lead and performing the functions I did with me, accompanying her. And then she was alone. In moments when I was off, not working, she was in my place. And then there was a day when I had to do a. So, I had to do a [work] and present it on a Monday morning meeting. On Monday I was on vacation. I did this report over the weekend. I was on vacation, not off. And then I had to present the report. But I didn't pass any information to her. Then at around seven in the morning, my phone started vibrating, ringing, ringing. It was her. It was her asking about the reports, how they would be, what she would present at this meeting. And then, okay? I explained the parts to her and she said like, wow, I owe you one. And then I said to her, you owe me nothing, you owe me a drink, right? And then, okay? Nothing too much. She also had a boyfriend in a relationship. And then we were in this joke, you owe me a drink, you owe me a drink, and then anything we did for each other, we were owing a drink. And in this, we started to get closer, we started talking about. We always talked there about the [company], about the problems happening at the [company] over the phone. And then suddenly, we started talking about music, what we liked to do on weekends, what were the hobbies, about family, and in this, we got much closer. And then we also started talking about our lives in general, not directly talking about problems, but it was clear that she wasn't happy in her relationship and I wasn't happy in mine either. I know that in one of those drinks, there was a day that let's go for a drink. Then it was an adventure because we left the [company] and went looking for a bar to have a beer and on the way, her car window had a problem. And then our adventure, let's say, started at a car workshop where we had to go to fix her car window. And then it was a funny thing. It brought us even closer. We went to the beach, to a bar, drinking beer, talking nonsense, talking about a lot of things. And then, okay? Each one went home. There was even a time when we were talking about the night, talking about music, what we were doing and not doing. Then she said to me, oh, I'm going to. Her mother was traveling, she worked at [Company] in [Municipality], but she lived in [Municipality], a city 30 kilometers away. And then, her mother had traveled for work. She was alone at her house. She said, oh, I'm going to make dinner for myself, heat up dinner, and we were talking, right? Then I asked, what do you have for dinner? Then she said, my mother made rondelli, I said, wow, I don't even know what that is, I don't know how to eat that. I'm much more of my bread with egg and cheese here, nicely. Then she responded like, bread with egg, oh, I'm in! Then we started joking, come here, I don't know what that is, how am I going to do it, because I was going to sleep in [Location] on the weekend at my friend's house. If I ask to go there again, I will disturb her. Then I said, well, sleep at my house, sleep at my house, take the phone, write and send it there, right? My goodness, now it's reciprocal. Then she said, so I'm going, okay? My house is a mess, I have to rush to clean it up, right? I went to the market, tidied up the house, organized things, left the house nicely. She arrived, we ate, and kept talking about a lot of things, listening to music, and suddenly we were kissing. And then yes, it was something beyond that first moment, really passion. That girl was beautiful. I said, wow, so lucky! But okay, we stayed that night and then we got even closer and then we started opening up, talking more about the relationship. I told her that I [redacted]. When it was, we stayed on [Date], when it was [Date], I was already telling her I loved her. And then it was reciprocal, right? Anyway, at the end of the year, we resolved our problems, the pending issues, let's say, that we had and I broke up with my fiancée. It was a messy breakup, involved my family, she said a lot of things and such. I told [Name] to protect herself, to block this girl, because I didn't know if she could do something. She also said this to her then-boyfriend. She told me to protect us from this. One day we were in [Municipality], driving, and I was still using [Social Media], and on my [Social Media], I used it but didn't update it, it had nothing. And then, I had on [Social Media] that I was engaged. And then one day I stopped, looked at [Social Media], oh, I'll take this off. I had already removed the photos, took off the engagement status, took it all off in the morning that day. At night we were talking, we were getting along very well, a more solid relationship, and we started talking about dating and such, how it would be. Now I know she turned to me and said, if you hadn't taken off your [Social Media] status that you were engaged, I would ask you to be my girlfriend. I said to her, so take a look because you're not observing things very well. She said, how come? I looked at it yesterday, and I said, you looked at it yesterday, not today. Then she said, now I don't even want to know, I want to ask you something else. You have to ask my sister first, for free, right? [Partner's Name]. Then, okay, we started dating. Recapping a little, on [Date] we stayed together. At [Event], we were already saying we loved each other, more or less on [Date] we were already dating. When it was [Date], we were living together.

Speaker 1 [00:12:30]: I loved it. Yes, she didn't tell with so many details like that, but with the same enthusiasm. I loved it! But now asking a comparison question, the couples you know as friends, how would you compare the quality of these relationships with yours? It's a judgment. Do you think your relationship has higher quality than your friends', or the opposite, you know?

Speaker 2 [00:12:59]: I think my relationship with [Partner's Name] is. We are so close to each other, wanting to be best friends. And why? Because the relationship was built firstly on friendship, closeness, trust in talking to each other about anything. And then we can talk about everything with each other, about everything. There's no forbidden topic. In other couples of my friends that I know, there's always a forbidden topic, there's always something. It's like if there's a handsome man passing by, I say, wow, look at him, handsome. Just like if there's a beautiful girl, I say, look, that girl is beautiful, and she says the same. There's no judgment for finding someone beautiful, for finding someone attractive, whatever it is regarding that. So, I think that's the difference. We can talk about everything with each other, there's no judgment of if you say that person is beautiful because you don't love me, it doesn't exist, you know? How come? I'm not the most beautiful person or the only one for you, that's not how relationships work, right? Okay, we are in a monogamous relationship, we love each other, we are respectful to each other. But me and [Name] talk about non-monogamy too, and I even say, maybe you are much more mature about it than I am, but it's not a problem to talk about it. So, I think that's it. The couples I know have paradigms about what to talk about, what can't. There are forbidden topics. Here, there aren't. So, I think we are really at a higher level of maturity as a couple than some people I know.

Speaker 1 [00:14:56]: I understand. And if you don't mind talking about past relationships besides the one you were engaged in, how would you compare these past relationships with your current one? What are the qualities?

Speaker 2 [00:15:15]: Qualities of the relationship or differences?

Speaker 1 [00:15:19]: Yes, differences.

Speaker 2 [00:15:22]: I changed a lot from who I was when I wasn't with [Name], when I started with [Name] to who I am now. I already told this to [Name]. In my past relationships, I was a manipulative controller. For example, if there was a fight, some discussion, some issue, the moment the light went out...

Speaker 1 [00:15:50]: But...

Speaker 2 [00:15:55]: Then we had, came a discussion, came something, and for me it was nonsense. And then I would find a way to turn the situation around. The person was upset with me for something. I thought it was nonsense. I did something there to turn the situation against them. And my past relationships? They were troubled, and I have at least 50% responsibility for them being troubled the way they were because I didn't have the maturity to listen to what the person was feeling and say, okay, I understand as I do now. So, what made me change a lot in the relationship was seeing a. [Name] had issues with anxiety. And then, professionally speaking, I saw how a bad manager can be harmful to a person, both professionally and personally. And then I said, wow, I don't want to be that type of professional with my team. So, I started to look much more at the personal side of people. And then, when I started looking professionally at people, people, people, I want to give people conditions to work. I want people to be well here to work. I also managed to see this bad side in my personal life. So how do I compare? Was I happy in my past relationships? I was happy for some moments. I was. But my impatience, lack of empathy, affected a lot. So, when I compare me with my exes, with past relationships, there's this difference of mine. How I see the world, how I see people, how I think I can impact people and the world. And before it was just me. Period. I don't know what you're trying to say, so it changed a lot.

Speaker 1 [00:18:07]: I understand. And now? What aspects do you believe characterize a high-quality relationship and a low-quality one as well? If you can list the characteristics for high-quality and low-quality, what would these aspects be?

Speaker 2 [00:18:23]: For high-quality based on mine. You have to be friends with the person. Really friends. When you're friends. I have my friends that I don't have. Problems in talking about any topic with them. I also have to have this type of partnership in my relationship. So, what I said earlier about forbidden topics, they can't exist. There are difficult topics, but difficult topics. You face them, you talk, you understand, you listen, you give in. There's this side here that brings benefits I can't measure. And then, when you look at a relationship to go wrong, if the person isn't mature to understand what a relationship is really like, to dive headfirst into the relationship. If the person doesn't, doesn't understand that. I'm in a relationship, there's my life, there's my partner's life, my wife's life, and there's our life. It doesn't work because it turns into competition. And then, in an unhealthy competition, soon you're fighting for space over something you shouldn't be fighting about. I've been in past relationships. One of my exes would fight with me because I didn't spend more time with her, while I wanted to spend time with my dad, my mom, my sister. It's like, okay, sometimes she could fit in with my dad, my mom, my sister. But there are many moments too that are just mine. So, this difference has to exist. I think in general, it's this, people have to understand how this understanding will be. I don't know, but they have to understand that in a relationship there's my life, the other person's life, my particularities, the other person's particularities, and the life we build together. So, I think it's that.

Speaker 1 [00:20:36]: I understand, and let's go back to low-quality then, like, without the absence of the things you mentioned. If you could say two words to characterize a low-quality relationship, what would they be?

Speaker 2 [00:20:56]: Distrust and dependence.

Speaker 1 [00:21:00]: Great words. And for you, what is the most important thing in a relationship? Like, is it love, companionship, dialogue?

Speaker 2 [00:21:14]: There are aspects, right? For example, love is extremely important. There's no relationship without love, but the relationship, love changes. In the beginning, it's a passion, something very physical, that other. [Name] and I even talked that in the beginning we had an absurd sexual life, and then it reduced, and then we talked about it. Let's talk. But then? It might be that we have much more in common now, many more affinities, that we are spending this time on these affinities than on sex. Before it was just sex, now we have more things. So, what's the most important thing? You have to understand the evolution of love. It's that it goes through phases, and it's not because it changes that the relationship is weaker. I think so. Love is extremely important, but you have to understand what love is. It involves dialogue, difficult conversations, it involves understanding, and it involves unconditional support. Depending on what the person is going through, depending on what's happening, you may not even agree with what's happening with the person, but at that moment, the only thing she needs is your support, support at that moment even if you don't agree. When the person feels a little more comfortable, come here, let's talk about this thing. So, I think that's the most important thing, it's love. But you need to understand the evolution of love in your relationship, this development.

Speaker 1 [00:23:04]: And then, already pulling the hook, I wanted your definition of love. What do you think love is? Like, it changes, but this...

Speaker 2 [00:23:15]: That's a difficult question to conceptualize. What is love? Love is a feeling that you allow yourself to give 100% to another person without any fear. You are who you really are for that person. So, there isn't no, I am like this with my dad, my mom, my sister, and I am different with my wife, my partner. No. I think love is this. You feel so comfortable with the person that you are who you are. You are the true you. I think that's the point, that when you are true, you feel like this. You open doors for people to see your vulnerabilities. I think that's the most complex.

Speaker 1 [00:24:19]: Yes, it's a great definition.

Speaker 2 [00:24:21]: Thank you.

Speaker 1 [00:24:23]: And how do you know she loves you? What does she do that makes you say, wow, she really loves me?

Speaker 2 [00:24:32]: Small signs, not a big thing. They are small day-to-day signs. She takes care of me. I take care of her. And I think, in general. Going back to the concept of love, since we conceptualized it earlier, [Partner's Name] allows me to see her as she really is. Just a bit more. When [Partner's Name] had an anxiety problem and I didn't understand anything about it, I was in a corporate environment where at that moment I didn't. I didn't really care about people. And then I started changing this perception and still didn't know what to do. I researched, researched, found something I found nice. Many times you don't need to say anything, you just need to be there with the person and give her time to recover, to regroup. Okay, I did that, but I didn't understand how hard it was for [Name]. To be with me, open the way she was, vulnerable the way she was until I. I also had my anxiety crises and I had my social phobia, which then I realized how difficult it was. To show myself that way to others. And for [Name], it was so easy, it was so simple. So, wow, why does she love me? Because she allows me to see who she really is. So I think that's it.

Speaker 1 [00:26:20]: Makes sense. And now, talking about conflicts, I want to know if you have any kind of conflict, divergence, challenge, and how you solve them or what strategy to solve them.

Speaker 2 [00:26:38]: I usually say that I and [Name] discuss something or other every day. Every day there's some little conflict, every day there's something to talk about, solve, and align. But it's that, we talk. We have a problem, we sit and talk about it, no matter how difficult it is. And an example? Last week, I had to make an urgent trip to accompany my mother to an exam. And [Name] said, oh, I don't think I'll go. And then I was like, what do you mean you won't go? No, because I have a lot of issues with college, and she explained to me and I stopped, no, I won't talk about it over the phone. A very important point. Then, when I got home, I said to her, darling, come here. I didn't like you telling me that you won't go because you have a lot of things to solve. Why didn't you like it? Because when you need it, regardless of what it is, I'm available. As happened in this situation, and I felt that at this point, you are not available for me, as it happened already on such a date, it happened like this, and now it's happening again, and I'm not having my companion, where is my companion? And then she stopped, thought. After a while, we came back to talk about it. And I said, no problem, go there, understand that, and after a while, come here, let's go back to talk about that, about it. We align, everything is fine. But I think that's it. It's sitting and talking. It's a difficult thing because many times the conversations a person brings up a problem, you can't talk about it, give the solution to the person at the moment. You have to.

Speaker 1 [00:28:47]: Because...

Speaker 2 [00:28:47]: Understand how that person's demand impacts you, if it really makes sense what she is experiencing. So that's it. What's the strategy? Talk about everything. But you have to have the time for the person to understand and digest what she is receiving or exposing. So I think that's the technique, you shouldn't be ashamed or afraid to say anything. But if you said it, the answer doesn't necessarily have to come at that moment. Maybe it takes five minutes, maybe it takes two days. And then the conversation continues because we have a pending issue to resolve. Like in this case of [Name] and me, we can't continue living, talking, and doing things here at home that we do or that we are going to do. This is also a bit of relationship maturity.

Speaker 1 [00:29:41]: Cool. And about frequency. From what I understand, there's no specific frequency. Like, at the end of every month you fight about a specific thing. It's more about routine, things that need to be solved.

Speaker 2 [00:29:55]: Something comes up, and we talk about it. There's no such thing as, so at the end of every month, let's talk about money that happened. Okay, okay. But we solve the small things there so they don't turn into a snowball.

Speaker 1 [00:30:12]: And would you say that your relationship is good for you? And why? Like, in general.

Speaker 2 [00:30:18]: It's very good. And why? Thanks to my relationship with [Name], I am professionally in the position I am because I am sure that if I hadn't understood how much she was suffering because of a bad [position], I wouldn't have made this shift in my head and stopped being that bad manager. So my relationship helps me in my professional life, my relationship helps me in my personal life, my relationship helps me take care of my parents. My parents. My mother is [60-65] years old, my father is [66-70]. They are stubborn and don't want to do things, don't want to go to the hospital, don't want to talk to us, me or my sister, about what they need. They stay quiet. And sometimes there are difficulties that me and my sister can help with. But my sister used to live in [City], which is 200 kilometers from my city. My sister now lives in [Country], and the one closest to my parents is me. But I am 550 kilometers away. So [Name] helps me a lot too with some things with my parents. [Name], how are things there? She says something, then sends me a message. We need to check this. When we go to my city, she remembers we need to check accessibility in your parents' bathroom, how is your father's back, if it has improved, if he went to the doctor, if your mother did the physiotherapy. So I can't complain. My relationship is incredible and helps me in various ways.

Speaker 1 [00:32:18]: And has the relationship changed anything in you? You already talked about this change as a professional manager of relationships. If you want to talk more about it, you can. But I think you already answered well professionally.

Speaker 2 [00:32:33]: It changed. The point we already explained. One important thing to say is that the manipulative [Name] no longer exists. So, I think this is a very good point about the relationship. I don't see the need and don't see why to do the things I used to do before. So it changed me in various ways too.

Speaker 1 [00:33:03]: And do you think she changed, the relationship changed her? In what way?

Speaker 2 [00:33:10]: Nothing changed her. It's hard to say what changed her, but yes, her maturity. I think our relationship. She went through a very complex phase at the [company] where we worked, and then I feel that our relationship was a huge support for her to be able to do things. Because when you are newly graduated, start as a [occupation] in a company, earn a big salary, and then suddenly you get sick and don't want to deal with it anymore, what are you going to do? Life goes on, you need to work, you need to support yourself, or you'll go back to your parents' house. So, in a way, she helped me grow and that allowed her the time necessary to discover what she wanted. When we talk, if I'm not mistaken, she left the [company] in [Year] and went back to studying now in [Year], late [Year]. And she tried everything. She did [field], she was a [occupation], she tried cupcake recipes to sell. She tried [Name] recipes to sell, did a lot of things and could experiment these things thanks to our relationship. So I think it was a turbulent path for her to find herself in the best phase I think she is in now because she is now professionally, studying, learning, and growing.

Speaker 1 [00:34:55]: And from the beginning of the relationship until now, do you think [Partner's Name] was one way and changed? Like doing some things and not doing them anymore, or not doing some things and started doing them, and you live together, so this change in routine might be more visible.

Speaker 2 [00:35:18]: So, I think we were so close, so friendly, doing things together that I don't see a change in her general behavior, simple things. I think she was. She was more insecure, especially after everything that happened at the [company]. And now I see her powerful, extremely engaged, extremely politicized about some things, and has a strong and firm opinion, feeling extremely comfortable talking about it. We went, she had an anxiety crisis, the last one she had, we went to the hospital, she got medicine, was a bit groggy, normal. And then, when we were leaving, feeling a bit better, an older man was coming in with anxiety crises. And we started talking to this man, telling him that he needed to seek help because these things happened, that she was going through this too, that she was there for that, that there was a system here in [Location] that provided support and such. So, I think in the past she wouldn't talk about her profession in front of everyone. But when she saw someone she could help, she did. So I think she is much more confident, much more empowered is the correct word.

Speaker 1 [00:36:59]: And do you feel secure in your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:37:01]: Yes, always felt.

Speaker 1 [00:37:04]: In all senses.

Speaker 2 [00:37:09]: I was going to present the screen, but I can't with my phone. But I will explain, like a scale, can you understand? If not, I can explain in another way. I will say two statements, and you choose a number for each statement. So, the scale is from 1 to 9, one not true at all and nine completely true. The statement, does [Partner's Name] really listen to you? What number would you mark? And five is neutral.

Speaker 2 [00:37:42]: I would give an eight. I think the question of listening has two points. I am a manager of people in my profession. So I understand that communication, I communicate with my team, I communicate with the responsible public to make my public understand the message I want to convey. It's my responsibility. So, I have the responsibility to call [Partner's Name]'s attention to a particular subject, to make it important. So, it's much more my participation in making her listen to me than her attention. Her attention is there. She is available for me. Now, her level of availability will depend on how I can transmit this information. It's my responsibility. So she listens to me.

Speaker 1 [00:38:53]: I found this answer very interesting. I hadn't thought of it this way. It's not entirely because of her, but because I, I didn't...

Speaker 2 [00:39:03]: It might be me, because if she listens to me in this context, it depends on me being able to grab her attention and really transmit that information. So it depends a lot on me.

Speaker 1 [00:39:19]: Cool. And the second statement, does [Partner's Name] care about your needs from one to nine too?

Speaker 2 [00:39:29]: Wow, nine. Even too much.

Speaker 1 [00:39:32]: What do you mean?

Speaker 2 [00:39:35]: It's like, for example, here at home, I'm the one with a salary, right? I keep joking that she is a [occupation]. She's running after her things. She had to have all the time to discover what she needed. And I say to her, darling, it's an investment. Now we won't have a great car, we won't have the best house. But this is temporary because soon we will have this and much more. And then many times she turns to me, for example, and says, wow, I wanted so much to buy something. Then I think, what's it going to be, a tablet, a computer, a TV. I wanted to buy cushion covers, and I say, my God, cushion covers? Why don't we buy them? No, because it's your money, I don't know what you want to do. What if you want to organize something. And then I know, I spend on cushion covers here, and soon I will spend on a tablet, something else for the house. And then I prefer not to. No, darling, please, it's not my money, it's our money. At most, I will turn to you and say, now it's not possible, but let's organize to do it later. So I think she gets very hung up on financial issues because she doesn't have her own money. And then I think she deprives herself of very simple things, thinking that maybe I would be giving up on some things I could have because the money is mine. So I think it's that.

Speaker 1 [00:41:24]: Now, changing the subject completely, I will ask two questions about your sex life. So if you don't want to answer, no problem, just let me know to skip. The first question is, have you had sexual relations lately? Lately is up to your criteria, not a specific time.

Speaker 2 [00:41:44]: Yes, for me it's okay.

Speaker 1 [00:41:47]: And how satisfied are you with your sex life? Very satisfied, finding it very cool?

Speaker 2 [00:41:53]: Very satisfied and very cool.

Speaker 1 [00:41:56]: Okay. If you want to talk more about it, you can highlight any point. Otherwise, we move on to the next. Do you want to add more?

Speaker 2 [00:42:08]: No, you can move on. I don't have anything specific to share, but it's fine.

Speaker 1 [00:42:16]: It's already the second-to-last question. I was also going to present the screen, but I think I can explain without presenting. The question is, how satisfied are you with your relationship? It's similar to how good your relationship is. You said it's very good. And the scale is from completely dissatisfied to completely satisfied, with neutral in the middle, and very and little.

Speaker 2 [00:42:42]: Completely satisfied.

Speaker 1 [00:42:45]: Okay, one more question.

Speaker 2 [00:42:48]: And procedural.

Speaker 1 [00:42:50]: Yes. And within this satisfaction, this complete satisfaction, what would be the degree of satisfaction? Like from 0 to 10, a number to quantify it.

Speaker 2 [00:43:06]: I wouldn't give it a ten, a nine. I think if I give it a ten, I won't worry anymore because it has reached the ideal, and then it's an opening to not pay so much attention to some things, not listen to her, not be available. So there's always something to improve. It's very good. I think I never imagined being in a relationship like this, a lot because of my background, my history, my friends, everything that happened, and makes us always try to keep up, keep up, keep up.

Speaker 1 [00:43:47]: Very interesting too, this answer. I hadn't thought about it either. This was the last question. Thank you very much! I loved the interview. Given this, I'm tired, but I loved it very much. Then you two can talk to see each other's answers. It was sensational. And then I'll send you some things on [Social Media], you can respond when you can. It doesn't have to be today. That's it. Thank you very, very much. I loved it.

Speaker 2 [00:44:13]: That's it. I thank you. I like to share these things. I think my relationship is so good like this. If I can contribute to other people's relationships being great and good too, I will do it. So I thank you for the opportunity and I liked it a lot too.

Speaker 1 [00:44:37]: One more thing before I forget, if you have couples to recommend to answer the research, like a couple you believe will enjoy responding. You can send me the contact or the link for them to fill out. Okay?

Speaker 2 [00:44:51]: Agreed. Agreed. You can count on me.

Speaker 1 [00:44:56]: Thank you!
