

Speaker 1 [00:00:07] So I will start with some socio-demographic questions before really getting into the content of the interview. I would like to know how old you are.

Speaker 2 [00:00:22] [20-25].

Speaker 1 [00:00:23] [20-25]. And how long have you been a "formiga" (ant)?

Speaker 2 [00:00:31] [1-5] years. I want to tell you my fears. I wonder until what day.

Speaker 1 [00:00:45] I already had.

Speaker 2 [00:00:46] So [1-5] years and [6-10] months.

Speaker 1 [00:00:51] Well, in the reason, it also took him a while to count the months, but he managed for [6-10] months. Do you have children?

Speaker 2 [00:01:00] No.

Speaker 1 [00:01:01] And who do you live with?

Speaker 2 [00:01:04] And what.

Speaker 1 [00:01:05] Who do you live with?

Speaker 2 [00:01:07] In an area with my mother and my sister.

Speaker 1 [00:01:12] And what is your main source of income in your current profession?

Speaker 2 [00:01:18] As a [occupation], I already [occupation] at a [department].

Speaker 1 [00:01:25] How cool! Very cool! And let me read what I forgot. Do you want us to call the "formiga" (ant) "formiga"? Or like boyfriend, companion, partner? Any specific name? Or can it be "formiga"?

Speaker 2 [00:01:42] It can be.

Speaker 1 [00:01:46] Can you tell me your love story with the "formiga"? How did you meet? How was the dating proposal?

Speaker 2 [00:01:58] So we met at school, we started studying together around the [grade leve], but we were just friends, always just friends. And I think as time went by, we were really just friends. I think that interest started to emerge. First, I think I felt it and then he did, and the story is long, but we got together, I think when we were [11-15], for the first time. But then I didn't want it anymore, I had a fit and said I didn't want it, and I think he still wanted it for a long time. And then it was this back and forth thing. I think when we were in high school, in the [1st-4th] year, we talked, I think we sorted things out better. I think I also had feelings, but I was very young, so I didn't feel secure about that relationship at that time. And then after we sat down, I think we always had a fondness for each other. We sat down, talked, and I think we also sorted out many things that I think were still unresolved, and it worked out. And I think we started counting that we were dating when we sat down, talked, and said what each one expected or wanted from a relationship. And that was when we started. So he then asked me to be his girlfriend, but we didn't count that date. After that, we just started going.

Speaker 1 [00:03:39] Very cute.

Speaker 2 [00:03:41] [Country] And.

Speaker 1 [00:03:43] If you were to compare your relationship with your friends' relationships, like people you know, how would you say? Like, wow, mine is much better, I'm much happier. My friends are crazy jealous. How would you compare?

Speaker 2 [00:04:05] In general, I feel like we're in a nice place, you know? Because even though there are nice relationships, I see among my friends and such, most still have a hard time. I feel like they can't pick up on certain things that bother them, certain things that are very important to the person, and the person keeps going in a way that the relationship isn't nice. And I feel that at least with us, I feel that everything that bothers us, we bring up. I don't say in general, but yes, the majority. So I feel that everything that bothers me, I bring up, and what bothers him too. And I think we can live very well without being. And I always see the others who have certain things that bother them a lot, which is something very relevant, but the person keeps going. And I don't think they take into consideration that it's important, yes.

Speaker 1 [00:05:08] So you can say, sorry.

Speaker 2 [00:05:12] So I said I don't know if I answered the question.

Speaker 1 [00:05:15] You did, but when I was going to add a question like, do you think your relationship has more quality than others you know?

Speaker 2 [00:05:27] I think it's a bit above average.

Speaker 1 [00:05:31] And if you don't mind answering, I'd like to know how many boyfriends or partners you've had and how you would compare those past ones with the current one.

Speaker 2 [00:05:44] Serious relationships, only him. The rest was very casual.

Speaker 1 [00:05:51] The notion that I didn't have a partner, and that's okay.

Speaker 2 [00:05:58] Oh my God, sorry.

Speaker 1 [00:06:00] And for you, what makes a relationship high quality? What are the characteristics of high quality?

Speaker 2 [00:06:10] I think besides respect and communication, empathy with the other person, I feel that it makes a difference to understand how each person feels called or feels that type of thing to improve the quality of the relationship, how the person likes it. That type of business happens, like the love languages, the quality time, those kinds of things.

Speaker 1 [00:06:43] Yeah.

Speaker 2 [00:06:44] Completely, and the main thing is to understand how the other feels, like, for example. I'm a person who likes quality time. I like to talk, I like to be heard, I like that kind of thing. And I think [Name] sometimes is more about contact, those kinds of things, a bit physical too. So, like, I think, honestly. But I think understanding how the person feels, renewing our energies in our moment, like how they like to feel good, that kind of thing.

Speaker 1 [00:07:24] So, high quality is understanding the other and respecting each other's love languages, the partner's own account. I think it is. Now, what are the characteristics of low quality? Why do you think a relationship is low quality? Fights? I don't know, cheating?

Speaker 2 [00:07:49] I think being very inflexible. Besides fighting, I have my things that I think and believe, but I think we have to have that relationship. The other person will also have their things. So we always have to be flexible with the other person's desires, which are also important, and fights about respect. But I think that's it. Yes, because sometimes I see that many fights are because, for example, people don't understand how the other person feels. Sometimes it's not even because of the fight itself, but maybe because the person doesn't feel understood, you know? That kind of thing, sometimes it's not even the cause of the fight but how the other person feels.

Speaker 1 [00:08:47] I know who is next, question if answered very well, so I won't keep repeating some questions for you. What is the most important thing in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:09:07] The most important. And. But. Partnership and understanding. And I think what I value a lot, I don't know if it's the most important, but I value it a lot in a relationship. It's because we are very friendly and very understanding. So even if it's a month where sometimes we are there, I think sometimes I'm a bit more stressed and more because my routine is very stressful too. So when there's a misunderstanding, I think understanding, trying to understand and listen, and then talking and discussing those kinds of things.

Speaker 1 [00:09:59] I understand. And now a more philosophical question, what does love mean to you in general?

Speaker 2 [00:10:11] I paid 20. It's hard to think.

Unidentified [00:10:22] Stop for a bit.

Speaker 2 [00:10:26] I think. And. But it has a lot to do with. I don't know if. I think it's that feeling of. That which makes us feel good. I don't think it's. Affection. The feeling of care.

Wanting to make the other person happy. Wanting the person to be close to us, that kind of thing. I thought it was a bad answer, but it wasn't.

Speaker 1 [00:11:11] It was a coherent answer, like correct. There isn't a right or wrong answer, but.

Speaker 2 [00:11:18] I think it's something to think about, to put into perspective.

Speaker 1 [00:11:23] Yes, it's hard to answer. I don't think I would know how to answer it right. Anyway. And in a relationship, how important is it to have love? Like, within the relationship for the other person?

Speaker 2 [00:11:39] Very important. I don't think it's everything in the label, but I think it's a strong factor here. Things go well.

Speaker 1 [00:11:52] So when you say you don't think it's everything, it's like love isn't enough on its own. You need other.

Speaker 2 [00:12:02] How do you do this?

Speaker 1 [00:12:03] And how do you know that the "formiga" loves you? What does he do that makes you think, wow, now I know he really loves me?

Speaker 2 [00:12:14] I think. I feel this love thing, especially in difficult situations and in situations that we went through difficulties with each other, but when one is more vulnerable, things like that, that I think he is there because he wants to be. Because he is very understanding always. From the beginning, he helped me a lot and even when he didn't know what to do, he helped me in the way he could. So it was he who understood me and helped me. He is well dressed.

Speaker 1 [00:12:56] So when he is by your side, no matter the moment and helping, you are sure he.

Speaker 2 [00:13:03] It is the willingness that he is there too. You know it's not just being there but opting to be present. For him. Or by. For the will itself, to want to be there and be the one.

Speaker 1 [00:13:23] And now, about some challenges and conflicts, what do you have in your relationship and how do you resolve them? Currently, it can be, but if you want to talk about past situations from a specific time, feel free.

Speaker 2 [00:13:47] Now, I think everything is fine. I think everything is fine, not everything is fine, but I think now things like, for example, I am more tired, I am a bit more stressed, but we always talk. There aren't many, many things, but I think what might have been the only one, the biggest problem was about outings. And not outings that I mean like when we go out, for example, to drink, and then I think it was him and he drank. But like, it was something very uncontrolled in my opinion, like it was always a routine thing to get sick. And in the end, it was something that bothered me even more because of the state he was in, something that kept repeating for a long time and I'm not a person who, for example, likes to party, I like, but it gets tiring. A period of taking care and worrying. And where are you? Where is the tea? The tea guy was to stop drinking, stop drinking, and I felt that it already took away my fun, that was because I had to worry about this all the time and it was very tiring. And I was very worried because I'm not a person who here frequently like this and I felt it was good. And luckily, we started talking several times until there was a situation where I said I couldn't take it anymore. Like, I don't want to keep living this every time we go out and worry about you this way. And it was a few years ago, but then I think since then we haven't had any more problems with that. Excuse me, but it was probably the biggest thing in our relationship, yes.

Speaker 1 [00:16:12] So, at that time, it was a frequent thing, but you managed to resolve it and currently there are more external things that stress you, and then you end up having some conflict, but manage to resolve it.

Speaker 2 [00:16:27] I think the call still continues, like, I'm more tired today. It's that thing of bad mood.

Speaker 1 [00:16:36] Or stress.

Speaker 2 [00:16:37] A week of exams, something like that. But this just generates more discussion.

Speaker 1 [00:16:46] Then the frequency of this varies, it depends a lot on how your week is. There isn't a specific frequency. And how do you think you already answered, but I'll ask the question just to make it clearer, how do you resolve it based on conversation? Or in some special moment, like going out to a specific place.

Speaker 2 [00:17:14] But mainly just when it's us two, us two, and in a safe place, somewhere that doesn't expose me, not even a minute, it's never nice to argue in front of people, almost always.

Speaker 1 [00:17:31] And besides this strategy of conversation that you use a lot, do you have any other thing you use to keep the relationship nice, not strange, and keep dating?

Speaker 2 [00:17:50] And you know when I have a relationship when we are in a conflict or something like that?

Speaker 1 [00:17:56] Not necessarily with another strategy besides talking. In conflict, it can be like every week we go get ice cream to keep in touch, those things.

Speaker 2 [00:18:09] I think it's like this, I think we really like to. I like it. For example, I realize that when I have a more difficult week, things like that, we always try to organize to. I like to eat sushi, so we go somewhere like that to eat or to the cinema, we also like to watch together. So I think we are like that. I think it's one thing, I don't have a routine like every week, I think we have this frequency. But when we realize like, oh, I don't know, someone is going to present some work or do something that makes them more anxious, oh, when we finish, we will do this, then, you know? Like, as if to celebrate, to relieve.

Speaker 1 [00:18:56] So, more to schedule things you like and always support each other. That would be a practice. And would you say that your relationship is good for you? And why?

Speaker 2 [00:19:12] Yes, yes, because I think so. We are very happy with each other, we always. We've managed to maintain this pattern, to respect the other, always listen, keep communication as we change. Like saying how I like to be treated now, I like this, I like that, and things like that. And I also wanted to say something, how it was because I also wanted to say.

Speaker 1 [00:19:48] And if you believe that a relationship is good for you, it's because.

Speaker 2 [00:19:54] There's something I forgot. But I think. Try to remember. I forgot. But anyway, you don't know. But. No, but I think so. I think. I'll say. Yes, because I think we remember that we have a lot of desire to grow together too, you know? So we talk about my professional dreams, his too. We want to grow together. To live things together. I think that's what maybe even cultivates us, to live things together, to achieve things we haven't achieved yet and want to do that together.

Speaker 1 [00:20:44] And do you think your relationship has changed anything in you?

Speaker 2 [00:20:50] A lot. It's a lot. I think in the beginning, I was a different person. I think even thinking that there's a lot. I would have to leave this thing, being inflexible. I had in my head that it had to be this way, and we see that it's not like that. I think everything is something to you, to bring out points in me and bring out points. We see what is better this way and it's with others I enjoy. Our relationship is something ours, something we build together.

Speaker 1 [00:21:33] And in what way do you think it changed your way?

Speaker 2 [00:21:37] Yes, I think so. I think I'm feeling that moment. It seems like afraid to say something wrong, you know? Like, I don't know. I don't even know if he knows much why that is, but other than that, it was a thing of being very afraid to say something, hurt or say something and he didn't like it or something like that. I felt very tense, tense, and I think the others. And it's okay. If we talk, we resolve. If someone didn't like it.

Speaker 1 [00:22:18] And do you think the "formiga" at the beginning of the relationship was one way and then he changed? No, not in the sense of the question you just answered, but like, oh, he used to give you a gift every week, now he gives it every month, or the opposite, or it doesn't have to be something material, it can be about the person.

Speaker 2 [00:22:40] Yeah? I think so, but like, for example, in the matter of gifts that I thought of, but I think it's something natural, like in the beginning of the relationship it was that thing, but then we always gave each other gifts every week, every month, I don't know what, those things, but I don't think it was a negative thing, like logically. I'm more punctual, I still see a lot of willingness in the company. It's not a gift, but for example, we always organize a routine for the two of us to see each other during the week. So, for example, he sometimes has night classes, so he tries to schedule classes at night on the days that I also can't, at night, on the days that I had to schedule classes on those days. So we can keep this frequency, you know? Not just on weekends. So I think we have a lot of willingness to want and to want and not look for something so distant. Besides prioritizing the other and prioritizing us.

Speaker 1 [00:23:42] Where do you feel safe in your relationship? Or why do you feel safe? How also.

Speaker 2 [00:23:53] I think. I think I feel that he knows me very well and knows. I think the weaknesses, things I've lived, things of insecurity, I feel that it's not that thing of throwing things in each other's faces. I don't think he embraces me in that sense. So, if sometimes something happens that. For someone. It may be okay, he knows that for me this can be a weakness, so he is very careful in that sense. Anyway, I think I've talked a lot too. But maybe I feel safe in that. Knowing that he embraces me in that sense and doesn't judge or throw water in my face at a more sensitive moment.

Speaker 1 [00:24:47] Then, safe to talk about anything and knowing that he will listen and understand you, that you trust him to open up, those things.

Speaker 2 [00:24:59] I think to have a safe emotional too, he understands me.

Speaker 1 [00:25:03] And I will present the screen now, because I want you to talk like from one to nine, how much you agree, how much the statement is true. I will present on the screen because the scale is ready and then it is for us to present. But could answer without presenting. It's building. Succeeding church. But from 1 to 9. How much do you think this statement is true, my partner really listens to me?

Speaker 2 [00:25:46] From one to nine.

Speaker 1 [00:25:48] Studies to improve a little.

Speaker 2 [00:25:53] I think. On the order of nine.

Speaker 1 [00:26:02] And why? Because here it's 100% good.

Speaker 2 [00:26:07] Finally, I believe that this thing is listening to me. The issue of understanding, not just information and not that thing of like when the person is sometimes tired and they are not listening to me because I'm saying something important before the person is functioning. I think this thing about listening to me and welcoming the information, finding that information relevant. Already a subscriber to welcome. Even so, knowing that the person is saying something important to them, accepting and listening, making a welcoming listening, simple things like that.

Speaker 1 [00:26:48] It's the same question, but for another phrase. And then, how true do you think it is? My partner cares about my needs. Then, emotional needs, physical needs. Like, if you're tired and he cares, let's not go out today, you can stay and sleep instead.

Speaker 2 [00:27:10] I think don't rush. I think he's always cared a lot, like sometimes even when. For example, his outings, he knows about something, I don't know. Some of his friends, sometimes, like something happened to me and he says, no. If you don't want to go, it's okay. Like something like that, no problem. But obviously, like, I have to make an effort, but not card-like, you know? But I think he's always cared a lot about me and it doesn't bother him. I think I see this, like it's not that thing of forcing and going, you know? No, he always respected a lot, always if it's okay. Like, I think he's very well resolved.

Speaker 1 [00:28:02] I'll stop presenting, but later I'll present again quickly. Now, I'll ask two questions. If you don't want to answer, that's okay, because it's about sexual life. If you feel embarrassed, you can just ask us to skip to the next question. And if you have had sexual relations lately? [Name] is the [occupation]. You can talk.

Speaker 2 [00:28:34] Lately, what period?

Speaker 1 [00:28:37] It's more of a personal concept, like if lately for you is yesterday or if lately for you is like last month, you decide. It's your life, you compare.

Speaker 2 [00:28:52] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:28:54] So how satisfied are you with your sexual life?

Speaker 2 [00:29:02] That's the number one.

Speaker 1 [00:29:05] You can answer in fact or more or less. I'm very, I want more, I want less in that sense.

Speaker 2 [00:29:15] I think yes. I will answer a point that maybe would improve in relation to privacy, right? Because, after all, I live in a wooden house and privacy doesn't always exist, and then that's more that thing of. Like, is it possible to do it like this because of the environment? And sometimes some.

Speaker 1 [00:29:48] External factors are not good between you and him, just because you live with other people, him too. Sometimes you don't have a space just for yourselves in that sense. You are the.

Speaker 2 [00:29:58] Major, because they are really.

Speaker 1 [00:30:01] Understood. Do you want to talk more about this? We ask you to. I think I interrupted you.

Speaker 2 [00:30:08] I think yes.

Speaker 1 [00:30:09] So I will present the screen again. And I have a list of a scale, but in words, not in numbers. Then I will ask you a question. You answer according to this scale. And depending on your answer, I will show you a numerical scale. Then I'll explain. In the second question, it seems confusing, but it's not to me. Just agitate. So how satisfied are you with your relationship? I know this interview was basically all about this, but it's just to make it more tangible. Like, on this scale, what would be your answer?

Speaker 2 [00:30:51] Very full.

Speaker 1 [00:30:53] Okay. Within very satisfied, like evaluating the degree of your satisfaction, are you completely dissatisfied, not satisfied, with your satisfaction at 100% or 0%? Understood? Is it confusing?

Speaker 2 [00:31:16] Within very satisfied.

Speaker 1 [00:31:19] It's this scale, like dissatisfied and satisfied, but it concerns your satisfaction. So like the most satisfied, or are you dissatisfied, median, or are you dissatisfied, low yet?

Speaker 2 [00:31:35] I've entered very satisfied, and that's it.

Speaker 1 [00:31:40] That's yes, it's a little.

Speaker 2 [00:31:45] I think within my very satisfied, the tube, and I say the number, are the three options.

Speaker 1 [00:31:53] You can say the number indeed.

Speaker 2 [00:31:59] I think. Eight. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:32:06] I will stop presenting. And why did you answer that number? What's missing to be ten in satisfaction?

Speaker 2 [00:32:22] I think. I think. If we think a little, I concluded that I think, for example, I answered still thinking a lot, maybe on the last question [Name]. I think the issue of privacy in this question is that it could improve and in what, but yes, in terms of relationship itself. So I think everything is on track, you know? So, for example, I think we.

Speaker 1 [00:33:05] Are very good.

Speaker 2 [00:33:07] And I think we still have a lot of desire to achieve many things so that things also get better. So, for example, we have more, like I said, more privacy, those kinds of things. I think we have many things that limit a lot, if very. But like us, we are on the limit. There are certain things in our relationship. But I think in terms of us, I think everything is fine. Now, external factors, I think everything is still evolving, but I think yes, I'm very satisfied. I think if I'm confused, I think I'll answer one thing.

Speaker 1 [00:33:50] I think I understood well. And this was the last question. And thank you very much for agreeing to participate. It's very difficult to get people to actually do the interview and answer everything, so thank you very much! The interview with "Formiga" was also very good. You two are very cute, I loved it! And the delivery? Oh, let me just remember one question. I will send the term by email and a thank you message on behalf of the team. And in that message, there's a link to answer about the research in general. Like, if you have any complaints about me, or about any question, or about the script, everything is in that link. Then you can answer whenever you want. And that's it. Thank you.

Speaker 2 [00:34:36] So that's it. So, okay.
