

Speaker 1 [00:00:15]: Ok, [Name], let's go. How old are you?

Speaker 2 [00:00:15]: [16-20].

Speaker 1 [00:00:15]: How long have you and your partner been together?

Speaker 2 [00:00:15]: [1-5] year.

Speaker 1 [00:00:15]: Ok. Do you have children?

Speaker 2 [00:00:15]: No.

Speaker 1 [00:00:52]: Who do you live with?

Speaker 2 [00:00:52]: I live with my parents. My dad, my parents, my brother.

Speaker 1 [00:01:06]: What is your main source of income?

Speaker 2 [00:01:09]: The main source of income at the moment is, I'm doing an [occupation].
At the [Location].

Speaker 1 [00:01:25]: Your occupation?

Speaker 2 [00:01:28]: [Occupation] at [University].

Speaker 1 [00:01:41]: How would you like me to refer to your partner? Girlfriend, companion...

Speaker 2 [00:01:41]: Girlfriend.

Speaker 1 [00:01:41]: Could you tell me a bit about your love story?

Speaker 2 [00:02:03]: With [Partner's Name]? How we met, like that.

Speaker 1 [00:02:11]: Yes, how you met, how the whole process was until you got here.

Speaker 2 [00:02:17]: Actually, we have a mutual friend. This friend studied with me in high school and has been her friend since childhood. Their parents know each other, so they grew up together. I studied with this friend in high school. One day, there was a party where this friend posted a photo with me. She replied to the story saying, "Oh, he's cute," or something like that. We followed each other on [Social Media], but that was it. After a while, there was another party of our friend. We met there, I started a conversation with her, and we began talking. We exchanged messages for a while, decided to go out, and met again at another event with our friend. We kissed at that event and began seeing each other more often until we decided to date.

Speaker 1 [00:03:34]: How would you compare the quality of your current relationship with the relationships of your friends? How do you perceive the quality of their relationships?

Speaker 2 [00:03:46]: I consider mine the best. Compared to the problems my friends talk about, disagreements, and fights, I consider my relationship better. Compared to my past relationships, it's much better. It's more peaceful, mature, and we know how to handle problems by talking. I don't know if it's luck or fate or if that's how a relationship should be, but from my point of view, it's better.

Speaker 1 [00:04:30]: How many romantic partners have you had?

Speaker 2 [00:04:41]: [1-5] or [1-5], [1-5]. Including her, [1-5].

Speaker 1 [00:04:46]: Ok. You've talked a bit about this earlier, but how do you compare the quality of your current relationship with your previous ones, and why?

Speaker 2 [00:05:08]: There's no comparison. In my perspective, this is the first relationship where I truly feel what a relationship is. There's a lot of maturity on both sides. In previous relationships, I felt suffocated and that the relationship was too needy. But in this one, we maintain our own lives while sharing half of it. She has her own stuff, her studies, her friends and I have mine. When we're together, we're sharing our lives. We're not trying to live the same life. Maybe it's also due to maturity as I was younger in previous relationships. Now, I feel we know how to give each other space and always communicate maturely.

Speaker 1 [00:06:41]: For you, what makes a relationship high quality?

Speaker 2 [00:06:56]: Tough question. There are several factors. Can I list them?

Speaker 1 [00:07:09]: Yes, we want to understand what makes you consider a relationship high quality. Adjectives. We want to understand what quality means to you in a relationship.

Speaker 2 [00:07:35]: Affection. You can't lack affection. The desire to be with the person, to rely on them, and physical touch are important. Affection, maturity, the ability to differentiate things and maintain your own life while being together. You don't have to take that person everywhere you go. Perspective and shared goals are also crucial. Both partners should be moving in the same direction. Not working with the same thing, at the same place, but they should have common goals and plans, such as having children, for instance.

Speaker 1 [00:08:57]: What do you consider makes a relationship low quality?

Speaker 2 [00:09:27]: Lack of maturity. Inability to resolve problems without exhausting the relationship. Different life goals. If one partner isn't ready for a serious relationship or has different desires, it creates issues. Misaligned goals and lack of maturity are what make a relationship low quality.

Speaker 1 [00:10:57]: What's most important in a relationship for you?

Speaker 2 [00:11:39]: Maybe trust But also, purpose and shared goals. If you can't see a future together, there's no point. Trust and shared purpose are essential.

Speaker 1 [00:12:37]: What is love to you?

Speaker 2 [00:12:39]: Love is making someone else's happiness your purpose. When you look at someone and think, "I want to make them smile forever." Like a mother wants the best for her child, always thinking of how to improve their life. Love is about actively wanting to enhance someone's life by being with her

Speaker 1 [00:13:45]: How important is love in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:13:51]: Fundamental. For me, love it's not only about feeling something for someone. Love needs to be active. Both partners must be committed to each other's happiness.

Speaker 1 [00:14:45]: How do you know your girlfriend loves you?

Speaker 2 [00:14:59]: Wow, that's tough. It's hard to think of an example. I feel that she listens to me and has a genuine interest in making the relationship work. She pays attention to my concerns and always tries to address them. There's always physical affection, and I feel her desire to make our relationship succeed. Physical touch was something that lacked in my past relationships as they developed.

Speaker 1 [00:16:53]: What challenges do you face in your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:17:02]: Currently, our schedules don't align well. We study at the same university, but sometimes we go days without seeing each other. But we can deal with that, we see each other on the weekends. Normal relationship issues arise too, but nothing major.

Speaker 1 [00:18:07]: Do you and your girlfriend have disagreements?

Speaker 2 [00:18:40]: Yes, we have political and religious differences. We have some differences related to our worldviews. She considers herself agnostic, and I believe in God, although I don't belong to a religion affiliation. These can cause minor conflicts, but we handle them well.

Speaker 1 [00:20:08]: How often do these disagreements occur?

Speaker 2 [00:20:20]: Not very often, but they're not rare either. We manage them well.

Speaker 1 [00:21:05]: How do you resolve these disagreements?

Speaker 2 [00:21:16]: Initially, it was harder. She would get mad, sometimes hang up on me. Now, we understand each other better. We've both become more flexible in our views, finding a middle ground. I started listening to her arguments, and so she started listening to mine.

Speaker 1 [00:22:37]: What strategies do you use to maintain your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:22:52]: When a discussion gets out of hand and she gets very emotional we stop immediately and change the subject. I like to surprise her with little treats, showing affection and care. Physical touch for me is very important and also for her, holding hands, things like that. We avoid serious arguments and don't text each other too much to keep our in-person time meaningful. I see a lot of people who text each other all day long. We don't do that, only if it's necessary. It's something I've done differently from other relationships. The in-person time is very important to her, that's something she said from the start.

Speaker 1 [00:26:03]: Do you feel your current relationship is good for you? Why?

Speaker 2 [00:27:02]: My current relationship is excellent. I've never met such a mature girl. I never imagined having such a peaceful relationship. In my past relationships there was so much arguing and fighting. We share goals and a sense of purpose. We plan where we're going to live, what we're going to do. It's more than just dating; it's a partnership for life

Speaker 1 [00:28:35]: Do you think your current relationship has changed you? How?

Speaker 2 [00:28:41]: Definitely. I've grown a lot. Both of us like rock, for instance, but we like different subgenres. She's taught me a lot too about the feminine world. She also works out a lot, so that influenced me too. I've been introduced to new music, cultural knowledge, and even fitness. We share different experiences from our upbringing, enriching each other's lives.

Speaker 1 [00:30:12]: Do you think she has changed during the relationship? How?

Speaker 2 [00:30:31]: Yes. In the beginning of the relationship she was very shy, very self-conscious. She's become more comfortable and less concerned with others' opinions, especially her friends' She's matured and become more relaxed in public and social situations.

Speaker 1 [00:32:53]: Do you feel secure in your relationship? What makes you feel secure?

Speaker 2 [00:33:23]: Yes. Her maturity and our mutual trust make me feel secure. I think we learned together how to mature. I know if there's a problem, she'll talk to me about it. I don't see the possibility of us fighting, calling each other names and ending a relationship in these terms, because I perceive a lot of maturity from both parts.

Speaker 1 [00:34:17]: Could you give a concrete example of when you felt secure in your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:34:31]: It's in the day-to-day interactions, seeing how she handles things maturely. There's no specific example, just our daily life.

Speaker 1 [00:34:47]: Ok, I'm going to share my screen. On a scale of 1 to 9, how true is the statement "My partner really listens to me"?

Speaker 2 [00:34:47]: Eight.

Speaker 1 [00:34:47]: How about "My partner cares about my needs"?

Speaker 2 [00:35:46]: Eight as well.

Speaker 1 [00:35:49]: Why did you rate the first statement an eight?

Speaker 2 [00:35:57]: She listens to me and cares about me a lot. But there's always room for more, hence an eight instead of a nine.

Speaker 1 [00:36:28]: Do you have a specific example for this rating?

Speaker 2 [00:36:42]: Once, at her grandmother's house, when I was asked about her biggest flaw, I joked that she complains a lot. She took it to heart and tried to change that behavior, stopping herself whenever she was complaining about something, even though it was just a joke.

Speaker 1 [00:37:50]: Ok. Why did you rate the second statement an eight?

Speaker 2 [00:38:06]: She cares about my needs and makes sure I'm comfortable at her house. She's attentive to what I like and don't like.

Speaker 1 [00:38:43]: Do you have a specific example for this?

Speaker 2 [00:38:52]: Whenever I'm at her house, she always asks if I need anything and makes sure I'm comfortable. She even tells her family not to serve things I don't like.

Speaker 1 [00:39:29]: Now, about your physical intimacy. Are you comfortable answering questions about this? Have you had sexual relations lately?

Speaker 2 [00:39:50]: As I mentioned, our routine has made it harder to see each other, so we've had less intimacy recently.

Speaker 1 [00:40:01]: How satisfied are you with your sex life and why?

Speaker 2 [00:40:18]: I'm satisfied. Sometimes she worries about things that I think are minor, but overall, I'm satisfied. I'm satisfied with my sex life, because we've been doing it. I believe it's simpler to men.

Speaker 1 [00:42:05]: How satisfied are you with your relationship on a scale of 0 to 10?

Speaker 2 [00:42:27]: Ten. Everything is great.

Speaker 1 [00:42:31]: Could you give examples of why you rated it a ten instead of a nine?

Speaker 2 [00:42:53]: I gave it a ten because, despite minor issues, I'm completely satisfied. In any relationship, there will be problems, but they don't diminish my overall satisfaction. Our shared goals and mutual care make me feel very positive about our future. We're always talking about our future plans, such as where we're going to live, or, for instance, what names of children we'd like to give to our own. I don't have any intention on being in another relationship, so that's why I give it a ten.

Speaker 1 [00:44:24]: Ok. This is almost done. I'll summarize briefly and see if you have anything to add. You are [16-20], have been together for [1-5] year, and have no children. You live with your parents and brother. Your main source of income is an [occupation]. You study [program] at [University]. You met your girlfriend through a mutual friend. You consider your relationship better than those of your friends due to its tranquility and maturity. You view this as your first true relationship due to past feelings of suffocation in previous relationships. You believe this might be due to age and maturity.

Speaker 2 [00:46:13]: The suffocation wasn't just on my part. I also sometimes suffocated my previous partners due to my own insecurities and immaturity.

Speaker 1 [00:46:39]: You mentioned that what makes a high-quality relationship includes affection, maturity, maintaining individual lives, and shared goals. Low-quality relationships lack these aspects. The most important elements in a relationship are trust, shared goals, and affection. For you, love is actively working to make the other person happy. You know your girlfriend loves you because she listens, her effort to make the relationship work and shows physical affection. The main challenge you face is aligning your schedules. You have some political and religious differences but handle them well by being flexible. Strategies for maintaining your relationship include avoiding serious arguments, surprising each other with small gestures, and limiting text communication to enrich in-person interactions. You say that your relationship is great, you've never imagined such a peaceful relationship, and the reason for that is common goals and you feel like you have a life partner. The relationship changed you, you've grown a lot, you have been introduced to new cultural aspects and life habits such as going to gym. She has also changed and matured in relation to her shyness and her self-consciousness. You feel safe in the relationship because of your maturity. In a scale of how much you feel like you're listened to, you gave her an eight, because she tried to change something because of you.

Speaker 2 [00:53:41]: Yes, even in a joking context, she listens and makes an effort to improve based on my feedback.

Speaker 1 [00:54:17]: In terms of listening and caring for your needs, you rated both an eight because she always makes an effort to address your concerns and preferences. Your current sex life has decreased due to your schedules, but you're satisfied. You rated your relationship a ten because you accept minor issues as part of any relationship. The positive aspects, like shared goals and mutual care, make it excellent. You feel secure due to her maturity and daily interactions showing her commitment.

Speaker 2 [00:56:40]: Option two.

Speaker 1 [00:56:40]: Ok. I'll send you a form for additional details and clarity. Thank you for participating!

Speaker 2 [00:56:40]: Thank you, [Name]! Good luck with your research! If you need [topic] help, I know people at [University]...

Speaker 1 [00:56:49]: And please send the signed consent form. Thank you.

Speaker 2 [00:58:05]: Thank you. Bye.

Speaker 1 [00:58:07]: Bye!

Speaker 2 [00:58:09]: Good afternoon!

Speaker 1 [00:58:10]: Good afternoon!
