

Speaker1: [00:00:03] Hum.

Speaker2: [00:00:04] Do you have a name or a term to refer to your partner? It could be boyfriend, spouse, partner, or just their name. Do you have a preference?

Speaker1: [00:00:14] We can say...

Speaker2: [00:00:14] Spouse or partner. Does that work for you? How long have you been with your spouse?

Speaker1: [00:00:19] Officially, it will be [16-20] years, and unofficially a bit longer since we met when I was already in a relationship. A few years earlier. And after my breakup and his breakup on his side, we got together. I can give you a precise date. It was in [Year] and we got married in [Year].

Speaker2: [00:00:56] Listen, I would like you to start by talking in general about the relationship, the love relationship you have with your partner.

Speaker1: [00:01:06] How can I talk about it? It's a happy, peaceful relationship, without conflicts, I would say. What else could I say? I think it's a relationship where we both find our place. We have both shared times and individual times. We share a lot of things. That's what brings us together, and we love spending time together. Uh. Was that your question? How can I talk about my relationship, right?

Speaker2: [00:02:03] Absolutely.

Speaker1: [00:02:10] That's what I would say for now.

Speaker2: [00:02:12] You said it's been about [16-20] years, if I understood correctly, that you've been with your partner. Can you tell me how it all started?

Speaker1: [00:02:22] Uh, how it started? You mean our meeting? Yes. We met in a professional environment. We worked in the same professional environment. And over time, we apparently had similar sensitivities. We got along well. Uh, we also shared a common foundation of intellectual reflection and humor. So it started like that. And then, as I said to [Name], we were both in relationships, and slowly we broke up on both sides and got together afterward.

Speaker2: [00:03:35] So, you told me that you were both in relationships before. If I understood correctly, you met at work? Was it a relationship at that time?

Speaker1: [00:03:48] Exactly. I confirm. Hum.

Speaker2: [00:03:52] Can you tell me more about how the relationship developed once you got together?

Speaker1: [00:03:58] Well, the development of this relationship. I would say it was quite an easy relationship. Yes, at the beginning, it was quite easy. How can I say that? The development? Let me think for a moment. Yes, it answered some of the lacks I might have had. It filled some vulnerabilities I had. The development also contributed to developing our romantic relationship. Since we lived together, we shared common spaces. It allowed us to get to know each other better. Uh, it also allowed me to know his parents better, which helped understand more things and establish complementary elements. Yes, that's what comes to mind.

Speaker2: [00:06:24] At the very beginning of the interview, you mentioned that it was a simple, conflict-free relationship. You used another adjective. Can you tell me more about this simple relationship? What is it like on a daily basis?

Speaker1: [00:06:43] Yes, on a daily basis. Yes. We don't have conflicts. We are well aligned. We also made some decisions that are perhaps unusual. She has a professional activity that is declining. Her original profession is in decline. She had different jobs because she wanted to work, but it was hard to find work in her original profession. I come from a family where the mother didn't work because she had children, and the father provided economically. I follow this approach where I work and provide economically for our daily life. My spouse has an accessory job, which is her pocket money. This arrangement makes our evenings conflict-free, as we don't discuss work issues that can be stressful. We wanted a relationship where she does what she enjoys.

Speaker1: [00:08:54] This way, when we are together, we can enjoy moments outside of work-related stress. I might have digressed, but that's what came to mind. Returning to your question, our peaceful relationship is due to setting a framework that enables calmness by mitigating external stressors. Additionally, we share a lot, enjoy [interest], dislike crowds, vacations, and love discussing culture. This shared foundation ensures a happy, peaceful relationship. We can also address issues openly.

Speaker2: [00:10:37] So, if I understand correctly, the peaceful relationship is partly due to your compatibility and shared interests?

Speaker1: [00:10:57] Yes, we don't complicate things. We aim for simplicity in life. The goal is not to make things difficult, as life is too short for that. We try to make each other happy.

Speaker2: [00:11:29] Make each other happy. Yes.

Speaker1: [00:11:32] Hum.

Speaker2: [00:11:34] If you were to compare the quality of your relationship to that of your friends, what would you say?

Speaker1: [00:11:46] We don't have many friends; we are rather solitary. But comparing with close friends, I would say we spend a lot of time together. I spend time at home due to my profession, allowing us to share moments throughout the day, like a coffee or a discussion. Compared to others, we spend significant time together and have aligned individual and shared goals. It might be difficult to compare, but that's my observation. Also, taking care of each other is important.

Speaker2: [00:14:36] Taking care of each other.

Speaker1: [00:14:37] I think it's important.

Speaker2: [00:14:40] So, taking care of each other, spending time together are things you don't necessarily see in your friends' relationships, but...

Speaker1: [00:14:50] Maybe. It's hard to infer, but sometimes this marker of taking care of each other might be lacking in other relationships.

Speaker2: [00:15:27] You said it's about giving each other space and freedom.

Speaker1: [00:15:34] Yes, freedom is crucial. Not being invasive, not dictating how things should be, even if I still have much to learn. Freedom in space and time, allowing her to be herself, not how I want her to be. It's an ongoing effort. Often individual functioning tends to overshadow the other's. I strive to be cautious and allow space for both of us to coexist. Freedom is vital.

Speaker2: [00:16:59] You talk about freedom, not overpowering the other. How can one achieve that?

Speaker1: [00:17:08] By listening to oneself and the other, making compromises. We can't always do what we want, especially in shared spaces. It's about existing together while allowing the other to exist. Compromise is key in building a shared life.

Speaker2: [00:18:21] You said "space." Are you referring to the conceptual space of the relationship?

Speaker1: [00:18:27] Yes, it's a space, both physical and temporal, encompassing our individualities and our shared construction.

Speaker2: [00:19:03] If you were to compare the quality of your relationship with your past ones, what would you say?

Speaker1: [00:19:18] They were more conflictual. We shared fewer commonalities, and I had less maturity. I was less aware of my behavior, less compromising, and more imposing. The conflict was more significant due to monolithic viewpoints and strong disagreements. Now, there is more maturity and introspection, allowing for simpler resolutions.

Speaker2: [00:20:17] You said they were more conflictual, and you have evolved in terms of introspection and self-awareness.

Speaker1: [00:20:31] Yes, I confirm.

Speaker2: [00:20:35] This evolution is linked to the conflicts you had before and the ones you avoid now.

Speaker1: [00:20:46] Yes, gaining maturity and introspection helped manage disagreements better. Before, there were rigid viewpoints and lack of compromise, leading to strong disagreements. Personal growth allowed for more authentic, less dissonant relationships.

Speaker2: [00:22:54] You mentioned earlier that previous relationships were unstable. What do you mean by unstable?

Speaker1: [00:23:01] Often, we project onto others things we haven't addressed within ourselves, seeking in others what we lack. I come from a working-class background and sought cultural elements I missed. This led to unstable foundations based on inauthenticity and unmet vulnerabilities.

Speaker2: [00:24:23] You used the term unstable, fragile, contrasting with the authenticity in your current relationship.

Speaker1: [00:24:32] Yes.

Speaker2: [00:24:36] Can you tell me what defines a high-quality relationship for you?

Speaker1: [00:24:50] High-quality relationships involve happiness together, caring for each other, giving freedom, and allowing the other to grow.

Speaker2: [00:25:40] How can one know they are in such a relationship?

Speaker1: [00:25:54] By observing mutual growth and change, both verbally and non-verbally.

Speaker2: [00:26:39] How can one know they are in a high-quality relationship where the other can grow?

Speaker1: [00:26:54] By observing shared moments, feeling happy together, and knowing the other person is growing and developing.

Speaker2: [00:27:26] Would you say your relationship is about care?

Speaker1: [00:27:49] It depends on what you mean by care. For me, caring is about ensuring the other person is happy.

Speaker2: [00:28:37] Take your time.

Speaker1: [00:28:42] It's about ensuring the other person is well. My parents' relationship was conflictual and lacked love and care.

Speaker2: [00:29:36] Lacked care.

Speaker1: [00:29:37] Yes, that's what I observed as a child. My relationship aims to avoid repeating that pattern.

Speaker2: [00:30:18] A pattern of not taking care of the partner.

Speaker1: [00:30:22] Yes.

Speaker2: [00:30:27] When would you say your relationship was least caring for both parties?

Speaker1: [00:30:52] Maybe in [Year] when I was more self-centered and egoistic, focusing on personal vulnerabilities and neglecting my partner.

Speaker2: [00:32:20] If I understand correctly, an external factor triggered your vulnerabilities, leading to self-focus and neglect of the relationship and partner.

Speaker1: [00:32:47] Yes, that's correct.

Speaker2: [00:32:54] Can you tell me what defines a low-quality relationship for you?

Speaker1: [00:32:47] A low-quality relationship would be like two individuals sharing space and time without genuine connection, like furniture in a room without harmony.

Speaker2: [00:34:49] Like furniture.

Speaker1: [00:34:51] Yes, like people without interaction.

Speaker2: [00:34:54] Without interaction.

Speaker1: [00:34:57] Yes, coexisting without harmony.

Speaker2: [00:35:19] How can one know they are in such a relationship?

Speaker1: [00:35:30] By reflecting on shared moments. Do you feel love and joy together, or prefer being alone? If you feel better alone, it might indicate a low-quality relationship.

Speaker2: [00:36:55] You mentioned the characteristics of high-quality and low-quality relationships. Are there other important aspects for you in a relationship?

Speaker1: [00:37:14] Yes, sexuality is important. Having aligned sexual lives. Also, accepting the family history of the partner. A high-quality relationship involves accepting and integrating the partner's family and background. My in-laws are supportive and generous, contributing to our relationship's quality.

Speaker1: [00:39:29] They provide economic support and enhance our quality of life. High-quality relationships also involve future planning and accepting each other's aging and changes.

Speaker2: [00:41:04] You mentioned the importance of in-laws. How significant is this to you?

Speaker1: [00:41:33] It's important because my partner has a good relationship with her parents. Finding the right balance with in-laws is crucial for a healthy relationship. Their support adds to our relationship's quality.

Speaker2: [00:43:10] It contributes to your relationship's quality.

Speaker1: [00:43:12] Yes. Economically and emotionally, their support enriches our lives, making our relationship stronger.

Speaker2: [00:44:20] You, you speak to me of. Of the distribution of salaries. And of the fact that it is you who bring the money when you live on on your salary for two. What what importance does that you think in in the distribution and and in that which you spoke to me a bit earlier, that is to say, to leave space, to leave freedom in the couple. To one to the other.

Speaker1: [00:44:51] Me, I will answer in two ways. The first, it is that it is not my salary, even if indeed I have a privileged professional activity that allows me to earn well my life. But it is our salary of which she disposes as she wants. There you go, everything is shared, even if we have on each side accounts that are individual to us. At the same time, what is mine is hers and also the reverse. I think that we are really in agreement about that and so it facilitates a lot in any case the aspects of daily life. Uh there you go. Uh. But it is a choice that was made also in common because again, if I go back to taking care. There you go, me what I have always wished. So I am a bit in a in a model, maybe a bit old, but. What can also create a financial dependence of the other, since as we still must say that there is this financial dependence. But it remains that me, what I have wished, if we go back also to freedom, it is that my partner does daily what she wants to do. In fact. There you go, if she wants to do leisure activities and leisure activities.

Speaker1: [00:46:17] She reads a lot, so it is the intellectual space, etc. I take care for five minutes. Finally a bit more. Yeah, it's okay. Yeah, okay. During this time. So what was I saying? Yes. Yes. So it is really that, about the remuneration, it is. Yes, me, I think that I really have a philosophy that is this one, that is to say that it is. It is not. Well I am not sure. A heritage that would be mine or it is my money, it is really. It is really sharing in fact. There you go, me I I. I have no possession, I do not want to own things. We do not have children. So the idea also is that we live the best possible daily. We reserve the right indeed to. We save a bit, but it is not it is not the objective because after us. Except our godchildren, we have no children. So it is again I think, the leitmotiv it is only that, it is to live happy the life, again, it is much too short. So it is there you go, it is to enjoy daily. We like to eat well also, we like the things of life, so it is that.

Speaker2: [00:47:59] You? Yes, you. You have linked the monetary distribution that you have salaries with the fact of taking care of the other. Yeah, that's it.

Speaker1: [00:48:10] Yeah, it contributes.

Speaker2: [00:48:15] Uh. I would like you to speak to me relying on your experience of what is for you Love.

Speaker1: [00:48:27] What is. Well for me already it is a feeling, so there you go, it is to feel positive emotions when one is with the other and to want to do things with the other. To want to spend time with the other. It is to want to please with the other. It is to project oneself. In life with the other. It is to be in movement with the other. Uh yeah, it is a bit that what I would say. It is a bit this resonance. Uh. Yes. What it evokes to me there, right now, it is I have used many times the word other and. So for me indeed love would not exist or exists only through the other. In fact, it is what it is worth what. It is like that. Because I just expressed how it can resonate or how I can make associations. There you go, immediately what comes to mind. And so in this conception a bit of love, it is that. My place. It is a bit erased, indeed. And it is. Yeah, I think there is really this thing, indeed, which is that which corresponds a bit to the guiding thread that I read a bit earlier, it is to take care. In fact, it is Yeah, it is the place of the other, it is. Yeah, it is like that that I see a bit love, it is like that.

Speaker2: [00:50:40] You said My place is a bit erased. There is in love for you an erasure, a devotion.

Speaker1: [00:50:50] No, but I think it is a bit my construction that is a bit like that. So I. I do not know how to say. I do not have a salutary function, but. Uh, I think also, it echoes with what I could observe in my parents, but I think that for me yes, love resonates more with. Uh. Yeah, this taking care, it is. Yeah, maybe it is also a way a bit to forget oneself and. One can forget oneself, but all while not living frustrated in regrets or. Or in reserves. I think that it is not the case. Yeah, but I think that the other, indeed in in love, it is the place is important.

Speaker2: [00:52:10] Yeah yeah, I understand well what what you say to me. Love exists in the reflection and in what the other sends back to us.

Speaker1: [00:52:17] Yeah yeah. And then in this movement in fact, that we put in this movement that we put together. Me, I like the idea of movement in fact. I think that we are all the time in movement. We build all the time. Yeah, this thing called love. It is not always easy. Well easy in the fact of being able to explain it. Uh there you go. But it is built it. It is shaped, it is shaped by two. I make a bit this gesture, but it is a thing, there you go, it is a thing that is shaped, that is made by two and. Yeah, in this thing of love, it is how? Yeah. How can I make the other happy? I think it is a bit that.

Speaker2: [00:53:13] So you would say that it has what importance in a love relationship?

Speaker1: [00:53:21] Ah well it all depends on what one wants as a relationship. Because yeah, in any case for me. Well it is that to take a place. It is a fundamental place in fact. So if I go back also to an element on which you questioned me at the start, which was how the relationship develops also. It is obvious that. This question of love, it develops also. In fact, if I look at sexuality at the start, it is more important and as we go along in any case, what I observe, what I live also, it is that it leaves more space also to friendship, to love, to something indeed that will be a bit more of this sphere in fact. Yeah.

Speaker2: [00:54:22] It is that there are different forms and ways of loving. And I would like you to speak to me of how you know that your partner loves you.

Speaker1: [00:54:35] Well because she has gestures. Uh that make me think that they are gestures of love. Uh. Because both she is also attentive. To what I can, what I can feel both individually, and both also together? Uh. Well both because she shares many things in common. Both because she also leaves me space. There you go, I come back a bit to this question of freedom. So I can also know. Because she wants to spend time with me. Because. Yeah, it is that. Yeah, it is that. Yeah. They are gestures and words in any case, that make me think that. Thank you. Yes, of love. Yeah.

Speaker2: [00:55:52] You spoke of the importance of movement for you yourself, conceptually in a relationship. Yeah, it is a movement towards you that she makes.

Speaker1: [00:56:02] Yeah yeah, we can say that yes, then that we are not on on parallel lines in fact. That is to say that we build a furrow that we put in movement each one, and sometimes we find ourselves on a bit parallel lines. But we also make this movement to find ourselves on this common furrow that we built. There you go. Because both I think that we have strong individualities, but we managed to build still this common movement because we are also loners. We also like to find ourselves in times, in times, alone both. It can be reading, music. Walking also. There you go.

Speaker2: [00:56:58] There you go a convergent movement. You said You are loners.

Speaker1: [00:57:05] Each one. Yeah, I think that we have a big part. Indeed, we are quite loners, but already we are and we also built this movement indeed in common because as I said, we do not have many friends, we like to spend really a lot of time together. We sometimes also avoid the somewhat social spaces like that, on which we are solicited. There you go. Because yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [00:57:38] Um. I would like you to speak to me of one of the last positive interactions that you had with your partner.

Speaker1: [00:57:46] Well, no later than this morning. There you go, when I arrive. So I am domiciled in [Town] and I work in [City]. So when I arrive, I send her a little sms to tell her that I am about to arrive. I ask her if she slept well because generally when I get up, she is still in bed. It is a first, a first morning attention which is. To know a bit how she is doing and then to. Yes, to wish also a good day. It is so a first positive interaction. It is that of this morning. Last night also. There you go, when we shared a time together. Both when we went to bed together. There you go, there are very regular positive interactions.

Speaker2: [00:58:55] I would like you to speak to me then on the contrary of one of the last negative interactions that you could have had with your partner.

Speaker1: [00:59:08] Well I do not know when we had a negative interaction. There, I have no memory, so I think that it is quite distant. Uh no. Me, I think that daily we do not have negative interactions in fact.

Speaker2: [00:59:32] No. Then even something that could be more distant.

Speaker1: [00:59:42] No but it is maybe. Maybe once, well once, once, but maybe a negative reaction. It is maybe rather when we have maybe points of view sometimes a bit divergent. And I realize that. I will maybe impose my point of view without letting the other expose her point of view. There you go. But it is not then. It could be observable because maybe in the tone, maybe in the semantics, I do not know, maybe it could be heard, but at the same time what would make me say that we have an interaction, there maybe a bit more. More negative. It is because I am realizing indeed that my functioning is disrupting our, our moment, our moment. Yeah, there you go.

Speaker2: [01:00:49] Something of which you are the cause.

Speaker1: [01:00:52] It will not necessarily be the cause, but. But I am one of the variables, I am one of the variables and. And. Yes, because maybe I am not able to open a space, in any case a space of pacification. There you go. And. Yes, maybe my individual functioning takes over in fact. There you go.

Speaker2: [01:01:36] You speak to me of many things during this interview and I would like you to speak to me, according to you, of the challenges to be met in your relationship.

Speaker1: [01:01:47] Ah. The challenges are they are They are multiple. Anyway, a shared life is a life. Of challenge, necessarily daily. Of course, there are small and big challenges, but the challenges, it is. Well it is to keep in fact this. Yes, this loving look, it is. It is. Because necessarily, we are no longer the tailor who looks for the first time at his client who comes and who makes an order for pants or something else. Because naturally, it is no longer the look of the first time. So I think that indeed the biggest challenge is that in fact and. To nourish this look indeed of the beginner, this nourish, this look. As if it was the first time that I saw my partner. I would say that the biggest challenges, it is that. Yes. During the.

Speaker2: [01:03:11] I am listening.

Speaker1: [01:03:12] Yeah, it is that.

Speaker2: [01:03:16] One of the challenges that you have already met?

Speaker1: [01:03:21] Am I back here? Yes, there are micro challenges that we meet a bit every day. Again, which are. Not to settle into routine, not to settle into a well-regulated life. And so that, that is indeed part of an attention, of an observation. Uh, in a suspension also. To suspend both sometimes one's functioning, to suspend also. Yeah, routines, the. Yeah, I think that it is that in fact which is important, it is. Yeah, the challenge is to keep the spark. In fact, it is to keep. Uh. Yeah, it is what what. Liked from the start in fact. Yeah, I feel.

Speaker2: [01:04:32] But you speak to me of keeping the spark of having it as on the first day. How? How do you do that?

Speaker1: [01:04:42] Well that, that is done by being an observer of oneself in fact. That is to say? To know oneself well. To be able to read one's inner movements both the way the mind, indeed, will grasp, will grasp the other both. How at a given moment, our functioning indeed, takes over. Uh yeah, it is that in fact. Yeah. How do I do it? It is that? Yeah, it is that, it is to be both the observer of one's own functioning and then be both the observer also of the functioning of the other. In fact. There you go.

Speaker2: [01:05:47] Since. You said indeed, it is about oneself, so it is something that one does about oneself.

Speaker1: [01:05:56] Well one does it about oneself, but for the other, in fact for the other. And indeed, if I if I go back a bit to this idea of this look. As it is the first time, this beginner's look. Well both, yes, it is part of this double movement, both a movement which is a personal, individual movement, and so to be able indeed to spot when my own functioning can possibly tarnish in any case. The relationship. All while taking it into account because obviously, the idea is not to. To ignore it or to. Not recognize it or to be in avoidance, but on the contrary, it is to be attentive to it, to recognize it, to allow it to be there in fact to exist, to accept it. But then. There you go, it is also a form of suspension. Because finally. Is it useful and will it generate something that is not necessarily. Very pleasant for the other and both therefore a double movement both this movement indeed, which is rather an individual, intra-individual movement, etc. And a movement indeed which is. Well if I am indeed in this movement which is mine, necessarily it will have a result on the movement of the other in fact. And so naturally a movement which will be this common movement. I do not know if I have been too clear.

Speaker2: [01:07:52] I have heard that what you say is. If I understand well, there is this notion of looking at oneself and looking at the other, you looking at, looking at the other.

Speaker1: [01:08:01] Yeah. And in this look in fact which is mine, it is. It is how can I also suspend things that. Will allow me to stay on this furrow in fact. There you go. Shared. Of love, it is that?

Speaker2: [01:08:28] You place yourself as an observer of your own reaction, your own.

Speaker1: [01:08:33] Yeah, it is that. Yeah, yeah. Forgive me, [Name], but what also responds to a personal individual development journey that. Today, I am in an approach indeed which is this one and naturally which will in any case show and which will come out daily in fact. So there you go, there we are. Yeah.

Speaker2: [01:09:00] A coherence.

Speaker1: [01:09:01] Yeah, a coherence.

Speaker2: [01:09:04] You wanted to mention very briefly a bit earlier, but we know that in a relationship, sometimes, everything is not rosy. And I would like you to speak to me of the conflicts or disputes that you can have with your partner.

Speaker1: [01:09:17] So very honestly. I think that we do not have open conflict. There you go, we can have conflicts, I imagine that she has some. I can sometimes have some, but they are conflicts that are resolved in fact naturally. Uh, again, I think in a. In a development movement. Because what I said just a bit earlier. Uh. In fact, I do not live a life of conflict in fact. Uh there you go, it is sometimes conflicts that are own to me because we are in individuation and we are also in a in a journey that is individual, in fact a journey that is ours. So it is rather conflicts that I can live with myself and so that I resolve with with myself. But I do not have conflicts in my life with my partner. Because again, I think that we are on a foundation that is a shared foundation. I think that we are. Yeah, in a construction that wants to be common what. Yeah, I. I reflect but. No, we are not in conflicts. For example, I do not know where it can be material conflicts or in conflicts of decision, of choice. No, no, no, no, no, no. It is maybe the opposite. No, No.

Speaker2: [01:11:03] It can be also small daily snags.

Speaker1: [01:11:07] Yeah, again, very honestly, there are none. What? So sometimes. It is sure that we have functioning modes that are not the same. Me, I am rather someone who is. Rather. Yeah, quite square. I am rather. I have rather a functioning that is. I am sometimes a bit meticulous, I am. Sometimes I like or I like Order, I also like. Yeah, so my partner is a bit different. There you go. But that does not create conflict. No, I think that no. Not really snags. No, no, no, no.

Speaker2: [01:11:57] There are not really snags daily. I have heard what you say maybe during the relationship. It could have happened on certain subjects. And if it happened? What were the means by which you resolved these potential conflicts?

Speaker1: [01:12:15] Well again, in a space of dialogue in fact. To be able that we each can express, that is to say say what we need to say in a space, indeed. That we have in common a space, we are able both to say and to hear, to. Or to receive also what the other is saying. Because it is like that that the means allow to resolve conflicts. It is that and. And then probably to accept also fragilities and vulnerabilities. Yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:13:16] Accept the fragilities of the other.

Speaker1: [01:13:18] Yes, then also one's own.

Speaker2: [01:13:20] And one's own.

Speaker1: [01:13:22] Yeah, uh yeah, One's own, yeah, one's own also. Yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:13:26] To resolve these conflicts.

Speaker1: [01:13:29] Yeah.

Speaker2: [01:13:31] What did you think of something, of a conflict in particular while we were discussing the.

Speaker1: [01:13:38] Uh. Yeah, well it can be orientations sometimes, it can be also on. A big conflict is a big word. No, I think especially that it is sometimes what could happen to us is sometimes maybe disagreements on. Projections or life orientations that could. Sometimes not be necessarily always the same, in any case to find alignments. Because both, we each evolve. There you go, it is that.

Speaker2: [01:14:41] Yes. You have several times mentioned communication, the fact of being able to speak, but also to be able to receive speech for conflict resolution, for the quality of the relationship. I would like you to speak to me a bit more of communication in the couple and in the interactions.

Speaker1: [01:15:02] Well communication, for me, it is essential. So yes, it is essential. Both to be able to verbalize. What one feels daily. Yeah, it is to be able to say to the other what one wants to say to them, whether they like it or not. Uh. There you go, I think that it in fact yes, but for me communication. There you go the important.

Speaker2: [01:15:56] Something that for you. Fluidifies the interactions that increases satisfaction. What place has.

Speaker1: [01:16:08] Uh Yeah, yeah, it is that. Yeah, yeah. It fluidifies also. It contributes also. To the quality of life. Uh yes, to the quality also of love. Yeah, it is that.

Speaker2: [01:16:47] You spoke to me as a means of resolving conflicts, communication, the ability to accept one's own weaknesses. What are the other means by which you maintain your relationship?

Speaker1: [01:17:05] By attentions also. There you go, it is sometimes very simple things. It is maybe to offer a book for example, it can be to celebrate moments that are important. There you go the wedding anniversaries, our anniversaries for example. It is to surprise also the other and to make surprises. Yeah, to reflect on things that we want to do together. Yeah, it is that.

Speaker2: [01:17:52] How to know what could make you leave your partner? Nothing. No. What would you say? This relationship is good for you?

Speaker1: [01:18:26] Because it makes me happy, because it contributes also to what I wanted. It makes me grow.

Speaker2: [01:18:34] That makes you grow.

Speaker1: [01:18:46] Yes, because it also allows me to ask myself questions. It also allows me to. That of. To see also my fragilities, to see also sometimes my my my anxieties. It is that.

Speaker2: [01:19:13] But you could say for example that. Your daily functioning is regulated thanks to the relationship with the partner.

Speaker1: [01:19:25] There are forms of regulation, that is sure. There are of course individual regulations and common collective regulations. So yes, yes, yes, I can answer positively to that.

Speaker2: [01:19:44] And to speak also of the fact that she helps you to achieve your personal objectives. Yeah.

Speaker1: [01:19:50] Point. Yes.

Speaker2: [01:19:53] Sorry, I am listening.

Speaker1: [01:19:56] Yes, personal objectives both in my professional life also. She contributes greatly to it. I live many things precisely. In relation to that. And then in my personal life also.

Speaker2: [01:20:11] Of course, you would have examples of these two things.

Speaker1: [01:20:18] Yes, she was very present and she helped me a lot when I did my thesis. She was really by my side. She helped me. She still is in my professional career because she has qualities that I do not have. And so obviously, she also helps me to progress and she helps me to advance. So that is great. And then both in elements that are a bit more personal, yes. By her listening by her. There you go, her ability maybe to bring other, other points of view, of course.

Speaker2: [01:20:59] I would like to know if you think you are the same person as before your current relationship. In other words, has the relationship changed you?

Speaker1: [01:21:09] Well. Yes, of course. Without any doubt.

Speaker2: [01:21:15] In what way?

Speaker1: [01:21:20] Again in relation to the maturity that I have today and that I did not have before, in relation also to my ability to take a step back. My ability also to build something fixed with someone. Yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:21:46] Concerning your your partner. Do you think that she is the same person? As before the current relationship.

Speaker1: [01:21:56] Me. There you go, just two little seconds because they are calling me on both sides. I just want to say that. There you go. So indeed, forgive me your question, it was how? I can indeed say also that my partner, my spouse has also evolved.

Speaker2: [01:22:42] Do you think? Do you think that she has changed during and compared to before the relationship?

Speaker1: [01:22:46] Yes, I think so, yes. And what makes me say that? Many things both. The way also she is able to take a step back, both the way she is able to verbalize both. Or things maybe crystallize less strongly both also, maybe on. It is the ability to get out more quickly from a from a difficulty. There you go that she is not the same still. It is simple. Uh. Position. Yes, because maybe she addresses me also in a different way. Yes, I would say, I would say that both I observe things indeed that are rather. On her side, then both things that are also in the life that we share together.

Speaker2: [01:24:33] Because one could say for example, that it is a relationship in which you feel safe.

Speaker1: [01:24:38] Yes, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:24:40] Yeah, yeah. Yeah.

Speaker2: [01:24:45] Why that?

Speaker1: [01:24:54] Because it responds to needs. It or she can respond to needs maybe in me, which are more vulnerable, more fragile. There you go for example to feel loved, it is important and. So that allows to secure, well to feel safe. Ask me your question again.

Speaker2: [01:25:35] Can we say it is a relationship in which you feel safe?

Speaker1: [01:25:40] So I had answered to the. I answer yes. It is why? Yes, it is what I have just stated. Yes, I have. Yes, then again, because I know that I will be there when I need her to be. Yes.

Speaker2: [01:26:24] Feeling safe, it can for example be the possibility to open up to one's partner about one's experiences, one's thoughts, one's identity, without fear of judgment or reprisal.

Speaker1: [01:26:37] That is the case.

Speaker2: [01:26:38] Because you have an example.

Speaker1: [01:26:42] Well we share a lot. In fact, we verbalize a lot. I share with her indeed sometimes my difficulties. I share my experience with her. And indeed, as you expressed it, she is rather in a position to receive things and to be able. Yes, to be very open, without instrumentalizing, without difficulty sometimes that it can be, but by not being in the in the judgment. Yeah, I think. Yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:27:30] You can be yourself in this relationship.

Speaker1: [01:27:33] In any case, I try. And it is true that it responds to what I said a bit earlier. It is hard to be in this ability to read in fact in one's functioning and to see at a given moment well maybe there I am in the process. In any case, my mind is making a movement, is in the process maybe of judging in fact. There you go, maybe what I expressed, the other or the way of behaving, etc. There you go, so it is to leave. In any case, I hope in any case this judging thought and to be able to come back indeed in a much more. Well in the moment in fact, we are in the moment, we are in the relationship. In any case in the relationship of the moment with the other in fact. There you go, we have purified. Of all additional complementary form of judgment of thought that has no place to be in fact.

Speaker2: [01:28:37] Too in the moment.

Speaker1: [01:28:38] It is that, in the moment.

Speaker2: [01:28:40] You mentioned it also, it is that. Maybe to have comfort, attention from the other, between them or danger. These are things also. That speak to you.

Speaker1: [01:28:56] Of course.

Speaker2: [01:28:59] Uh. Well, I would like us to address briefly another dimension that you mentioned earlier, constitutive of couple relationships, it is sexuality. We know that it can be a more or less important dimension in a relationship. Is it so for you?

Speaker1: [01:29:20] I think that it is a bit less now. Uh Yeah, uh. There you go. Because it is also moments when we need to be in agreement. There you go, I do not know if that speaks, but I do not know if one can always be. And so it is to be more or less receptive also to the state of the other and to that these moments. There of sexuality are shared when the other feels them also what. So today, then with age. I think that there are two things that are important, much more important also. There you go, even if sexuality also contributes. In any case, there you go this notion of love and to share. Through the bodies also. What we feel for each other what. But I would say. A bit less.

Speaker2: [01:30:40] Simply, but it is for you, if I understand well, a way indeed to demonstrate. The feeling, to make it tangible.

Speaker1: [01:30:52] Yes, it can be. It can be. But it is not only that in fact. It can be also. How to say. I have. No, but I think that it is that. In fact, it is. Yes, it is moments in fact when we rather want. To be well moments. Yeah, it is great. It is what we said a bit earlier, but I think that it also contributes to gestures that show love for each other.

Speaker2: [01:32:24] A way to. To show.

Speaker1: [01:32:28] Yeah, yeah, I think. Yeah.

Speaker2: [01:32:29] To make concrete. Yeah. Currently. Roughly, what is the frequency of your sexual relations?

Speaker1: [01:32:46] A bit, I would say. Well two or three times a month.

Speaker2: [01:32:57] Are you satisfied with your sex life?

Speaker3: [01:33:00] Yeah, yeah.

Speaker2: [01:33:08] I am going to share my screen. Uh huh. There is going to be a scale and I am going to ask you to. To respond to the items. So there are two. Tell me if you see it correctly. Yeah. So in general, my partner really listens to me. The scale goes from 1 to 9, 1 being not at all true, a bit true, 5 moderately true. It is very true and 9 completely true. Where would you place yourself?

Speaker1: [01:33:37] I would say very true.

Speaker2: [01:33:39] Very true. So why? Why this one.

Speaker1: [01:33:45] Well because again, I think that. There is listening indeed which is verbalized and listening which is external, that is to say the one indeed that will. Put us in a common space. And then there is also the internal listening in fact. And so I would say indeed very true this because what I can hear.

Speaker3: [01:34:16] Uh.

Speaker1: [01:34:19] It seems to us indeed that my partner is well in listening after, but obviously in her internal space, I do not know in fact. There you go, I do not want to say that there is dissonance, but. There you go what this scale expresses to me in relation indeed to. To this double state that it evokes to me both listening indeed which is. In this space, indeed. In common. And then both where there is. There is always an internal space in fact, which is her own and both, it seems to me. We listen also, but we can listen in a somewhat different way, also listen maybe to what. Her little inner voice also, what it tells her at this moment, maybe also maybe the thoughts, listen to her thoughts, also listen to the emotions that we have at this moment, in fact. There you go, that is why I put rather the cursor on this one.

Speaker2: [01:35:29] So why not eight? Or six.

Speaker1: [01:35:34] Why not eight or six? So it is not because Treble was positioned on on the number seven, so it is what appeared to me immediately. And then. It is not I cannot answer precisely. There you go, it is what seems to me in any case balanced and appropriate.

Speaker2: [01:36:04] So my partner is generally attentive to my needs on this same scale. Where would you place yourself?

Speaker1: [01:36:14] Spontaneously. I would have said also very true.

Speaker2: [01:36:24] So why this one.

Speaker1: [01:36:36] Uh. Why this one. It is a bit difficult in fact to associate finally a number, but if I stay just on very true, why Very true? Because. Because yes, it is the case. Because again, I think that she is attentive to what I could have mentioned previously and she is attentive to my needs. She responds to them. She tries to respond to them because sometimes it is not always simple.

Speaker3: [01:37:12] Uh. There you go, my my.

Speaker1: [01:37:20] But it satisfies me. It satisfies me to listen to my needs.

Speaker2: [01:37:28] Why not eight or why not six?

Speaker1: [01:37:32] We are not going to answer In fact, it is because. I can answer it is again I would rather be on. There you go in relation to the items, in relation to this item, but I would rather be on very true, completely true. So for me yes, in listening, it is very true. There you go. Very well.

Speaker2: [01:38:04] Uh, to what extent are you satisfied with your relationship? It goes from completely dissatisfied, very dissatisfied, rather dissatisfied. A certain other, rather satisfied, very satisfied and completely satisfied.

Speaker1: [01:38:14] No, I cannot be satisfied.

Speaker2: [01:38:17] I would say completely satisfied.

Speaker1: [01:38:18] Satisfied.

Speaker2: [01:38:20] You answered in a language form If ever we switched to a numerical form, zero would be not at all satisfied and ten completely satisfied. Where would you place yourself?

Speaker1: [01:38:30] Me I would say. Me, I tend to say easily nine ten.

Speaker2: [01:38:45] But rather nine, or rather ten.

Speaker1: [01:38:51] Well after for me, again, the numbers do not mean much because it is as if we put a limit in fact. But what I feel, I can say yes. Today, I am completely satisfied with my relationship. After that, to associate a number with it, for me, the number, it is as if it put a limit in fact. It was. Or a performance. There you go. No, it is. But I can say today, yes. I have a complete satisfaction in any case of my relationship.

Speaker2: [01:39:24] It is as if you were noting In fact, it is that which.

Speaker1: [01:39:26] Yeah, it bothers me a bit in fact, I am in this difficulty indeed of notation, but on the other hand, if we stay just on the language elements of the scale, the verbal elements, it suits me. Very well.

Speaker2: [01:39:45] Listen, we are approaching the end of the interview. Uh, is there something you would like to add, specify, modify?

Speaker1: [01:39:58] No, I think that we have. Well brushed the subject. There you go, I think that I have tried to unfold in any case the different leaves of my relationship. And to be able to express, evoke in a sincere and authentic way what I wanted. To share, No, it seems to me, it seems good to me.

Speaker2: [01:40:22] Nothing important that.

Speaker3: [01:40:26] No, no.

Speaker1: [01:40:27] No, I see nothing, I have nothing that crosses my mind at this moment. No. You mentioned indeed at a given moment the present moment. Yes, I think that I maybe did not express it enough, but I think that. For me, a fundamental element, it is the present moment in this relationship.

Speaker2: [01:40:45] A fundamental element, you say?

Speaker4: [01:40:49] Yeah.

Speaker2: [01:40:50] In relation to the fact of being in anticipation or not.

Speaker1: [01:40:54] No, no, it is it is for me the present moment, it is to be completely connected to reality, that is to say to be in the moment, really and of what is happening, and not to be in a movement indeed where the Mind will maybe bring me back to things of the past or to projections, but it is really to live the moment for what it is. In fact, it is transitory, so let's live the moment for what it offers us.

Speaker2: [01:41:24] A way of, as you mentioned several times, of. To enjoy this moment that belongs to us.

Speaker1: [01:41:32] Yeah, yeah, yeah. And then which is which is fleeting, which The previous moment is not the same as the following moment, etc. So let's enjoy the moment that is inscribed there, in this space that is ours.

Speaker2: [01:41:48] It is something that for you is part of, contributes to the quality of a relationship. This ability to appreciate the.

Speaker1: [01:41:56] Relationship with.

Speaker2: [01:41:57] The other. Very well. I am going to stop the recording.
