

Interviewer: Alright, Wonderful, okay

Interviewer: How should I call you first?

Speaker: You can call me [Participant's Name].

Interviewer: Okay, then I'll just say [Participant's Name].

Speaker: Exactly, and you are [Name].

Interviewer: Yes, yes. How old are you?

Speaker: I'm [21-25] years old.

Interviewer: So, [Participant's Name], How long have you been together with your partner?

Speaker: We've been talking for [1-5] year and [1-5] months. We've been in a romantic relationship for [1-5] year and [16-20] days.

Interviewer: Do you have children?

Speaker: No, we don't have children.

Interviewer: Who do you live with at home?

Speaker: My mother and father. My sister is studying out of town. When she comes back, she stays with us. There are [1-5] of us.

Interviewer: What is your main source of income? Or if you have a current job, I can ask about that too.

Speaker: I work as a [occupation] at [Company]. There is an income channel from there, I earn from my salary. Also I am interested in the [field] and I earn from the [field]. I make income from the [field].

Interviewer: How would you like me to address your partner?

Speaker: [Partner's Name]. You can call her [Partner's Name].

Interviewer: Alright. If it's suitable for you, I can call her as your girlfriend, partner, or lover. Or I can just call her [Partner's Name] directly.

Speaker: You can call her [Partner's Name] directly.

Interviewer: Okay. Can you tell me a bit about how you met [Partner's Name] and how your relationship started?

[Portion Redacted]

Interviewer: How would you compare the quality of your relationship, compared to that of your friends' relationships?

Speaker: I think it's much higher quality and we are more connected to each other. I even ask her what I should eat, and she asks me what to cook as well. Everything, including food, is something we decide together. I don't choose clothes for myself; she usually chooses for me, and I just buy them.

Interviewer: Can you elaborate a bit on why you think it's more quality and connected?

Speaker: Well, I don't know, it's entirely a feeling. We respect each other more, think of each other more, care more and are thoughtful more. You can understand this socially; there's a higher quality relationship which is not clingy. There is this expression like this. Our relationship is not a clingy one. We make long-term plans. We can push each other forward, lift each other up. We are in the relationship like this. We don't hold each other back or pull each other down. That's why I think it's higher quality. At least, we can teach each other a lot.

Interviewer: How many romantic relationships have you had in the past?

Speaker: [1-5], at the end of high school.

Interviewer: How do you compare the quality of your current relationship to previous ones?

Speaker: Much higher quality.

Interviewer: Can you elaborate on why you think so?

Speaker: Because [Partner's Name] is much smarter, more cultured, has more quality, loves to live more. Her friendships are also very nice. For example, her friends have become my friends. I can even call them whenever I want, no matter what the subject is. That's why [Partner's Name] seems very different to me. Emotionally, I've fallen very hard for her.

Interviewer: What makes a relationship high quality for you?

Speaker: Her thinking about me, both in the long term and in daily life, and showing interest. There can't be a relationship without interest. A person who loves should show interest. No need if they don't show.

Interviewer: Why do you think like this? I mean, to think and to do it in a forward-looking way.

Speaker: Because we've reached the age of [21-25], there's no need for meaningless relationships just to pass the time. If I've found someone who I think is suitable for me and if I think we can make each other stronger in the future, and if I love them, the most important thing is the emotional bond. That's why I think so.

Interviewer: What makes a relationship low quality for you?

Speaker: Low quality.. This is a very good question, I've never thought about it. I think low quality is fights and toxicity. If there's constant fighting and toxicity, insults, disrespect, these things lower the quality significantly. I know this because I've seen it around me. I try to speak thoughtfully, but definitely, these are things that lower the quality.

Interviewer: Would you like to elaborate a little bit on why you think the way you do about this fight and toxicity?

Speaker: Because imagine constantly breaking up and making up, shouting at each other, no respect, maybe even violence. These things seem very bad to me. It seems low quality to me. These things may get you through the day, but they won't secure your years and future. If it's like this in a relationship, it will only go so far in marriage. That's what I think. Maybe some silly relationships can last forever, but this is how I think.

Interviewer: So would you say that high-quality relationships are that involve thinking about the other person?

Speaker: Absolutely. I think a quality relationship is one that is respectful and thoughtful. If both people are interested in each other, it's respectful and thoughtful.

Interviewer: How can someone know they are in a respectful and thoughtful relationship? Can you tell me a little bit more about it?

Speaker: For example, let me tell you by giving an example. One of the most emotional moments for me was when I started a new job. I had just graduated and started working immediately. She asked me about my job and bought me a nice signature pen. This seemed very thoughtful to me. My family hadn't even bought me that honestly. It seemed very thoughtful. She got me a t-shirt for my graduation and arranged places for my birthday. This interest and thoughtfulness captivate me. I think it should be like this. A person who loves should show interest and express their love. If they don't say it or show it, they should do one of the two, either say it or show their interest. That's what I think.

Interviewer: When can you say your relationship was most forward-thinking, respectful, and thoughtful?

Speaker: It has always been respectful and thoughtful. Forward-thinking has changed. This year in [Month], I can say our relationship became definitely forward-thinking. It was always respectful and thoughtful from the beginning. But in [Month], it became clear that we would have a forward-thinking relationship. This is what I think. Because before that, there could be gaps. [Partner's Name]'s first lover/boyfriend is me. She hadn't experienced much, She's been through a lot too. And [Partner's Name] is a difficult girl, a difficult person, a difficult individual. How can I explain? Not everyone is the same. There are people who are easily accessible and those who are difficult. [Partner's Name] is one of those. Every relationship already has a period of settling. But It took a little longer for our relationship to settle, almost a year.

Interviewer: You mentioned it is respectful and thoughtful but When was it least respectful and thoughtful, or if there was such a moment?

Speaker: There was. But once, I thought it was like that without understanding her, but actually, it wasn't. Once, she made me feel like that, but she actually wasn't. It happened last [Event] Should I tell the story?

Interviewer: You can share as you feel comfortable.

Speaker: Okay, I'll tell you. Last [Event], I couldn't go to [City]. I was studying out of town. Then she went to [Location] with her friends. Our relationship had just started, and I couldn't trust the outside world, not [Partner's Name], but I couldn't trust the outside world because I was worried about [Partner's Name] getting hurt. The idea of her drinking alcohol or getting drunk and the people around her seemed very bad to me. This wasn't thoughtlessness, but I thought she didn't realize she was in a relationship. But when I listened to her friends, I found out that she had insisted on going to a better place, drinking less, and not getting drunk, considering me. She was very thoughtful.

Interviewer: In your previous answers, you actually touched on this a bit. So I want to ask again, what are the most important things in a relationship for you?

Speaker: Thoughtfulness and interest. And..caring. I love being cared for. My personality is like that. I grew up in a family where I was very cared for and protected. That's why [Partner's Name]'s caring for me like this makes me happy. I love it when she shops for me, cooks for me, thinks about my work life. The most important thing is that she doesn't just give me her free time; she gives me time from her busy schedule. I love that.

Interviewer: What does love mean to you?

Speaker: Love means I can do anything for her. I can do anything for her. I think it's that simple. I can do anything for her. Everyone thinks about doing everything for their loved one, and I do too. I've done a lot for her. I can do anything for her now.

Interviewer: How important is love in a relationship?

Speaker: It is important. It is the most important thing. Of course, love (sevgi) isn't everything. It requires harmony. A relationship requires harmony. Love (aşk) is the most important thing in a relationship.

Interviewer: Can you elaborate on why love is the most important thing in a relationship?

Speaker: Because people live with their emotions. They live with their hormones and feelings. In relationships, logic isn't the most important thing and shouldn't be. Emotions and logic are separate in relationships. Emotional relationships and logical relationships. In emotional relationships, love is the most important thing because it keeps you going. Even if your partner makes a mistake, you accept it. You say okay. You do everything for them, think about them.

Even if they are unhappy, you do everything to make them happy. It requires effort. I don't remain in my own happiness; I continue to try to make them happy.

Interviewer: How do you know [Partner's Name] loves you?

Speaker: How do I know [Partner's Name] loves me... I make a lot of mistakes in the relationship, Sinem. I make a lot of mistakes. I can be very rude and thoughtless. As a man, I'm a jealous person. All these actions come from jealousy. They really all come from jealousy. She even forbade me this word in our last argument. In our last argument, it was completely due to jealousy. I can't control myself, and she constantly forgives me. What was the question again? One second. I got lost in the events. Our last conflict came to my mind, for this reason. What was the question? Could say again?

Interviewer: Of course, it's natural. These are very personal questions, so it's natural to get lost in memories.

Speaker: Yes, yes. When you ask a question, I get lost in the events. I lose track of what I'm saying.

Interviewer: No problem. I was asking how you know [Partner's Name] loves you.

Speaker: She is forgiving. She is very forgiving. She is not a motherly person right now, but I can feel her forgiving nature. Because no matter what mistakes I make, she forgives me. She wasn't used to this. Her family isn't strict. She is completely independent. Her life is completely free. She only has the obligation to go to school and continue her life. She has lived like this for [21-25] years. If she changes her habits when I'm in her life, I think that's a good thing. That's what it is.

Interviewer: What are the difficulties in your relationship?

Speaker: Me. I'm the one who causes difficulties, probably. And [Partner's Name]'s very free lifestyle, for [21-25] years. There's a situation like this. I do everything for [Partner's Name] in the relationship, thinking about her, thinking about what might disturb her. I avoid places I shouldn't go to, and I do not things I shouldn't do, just to make her happy. At first, she wasn't aware of this, but now she is and thinks like me. And she continues like me.

Interviewer: Do you and [Partner's Name] argue?

Speaker: We used to argue a lot during the settling period. After [Month], we stopped arguing. It happens occasionally. The last big argument was about [1-5] month and a half ago. She did not talk to me for almost a day.

Interviewer: What are these arguments usually about?

Speaker: My jealousy, sometimes she behave in thoughtless way.

Interviewer: Can you describe the last argument?

Speaker: Here's what happened. After work, I came home, got my car, and we were going to go out, have dinner. Then my dad called and said he needed the car that day. So I couldn't get the car. I told [Partner's Name] that we didn't have the car, so we couldn't go out comfortably. I told her to meet me tomorrow. She said okay. Then in the evening, my dad called again and said his work was extended, and he wouldn't be coming home. So I called [Partner's Name] and told her this. She said she had promised her friends she would meet with her friend's boyfriend and hang out until nine, and after that, I could pick her up. I said okay. Nine o'clock came, and [Partner's Name] didn't inform me. I messaged her, asking why we weren't meeting at nine. She said she was leaving soon, but it took almost an hour because she was meeting her friend's boyfriend. During that hour, I felt very uncomfortable. I didn't like waiting, and we argued a lot about it. We didn't talk for almost a day and a half.

Interviewer: How do you resolve similar arguments or conflicts?

Speaker: I have a solution now. I leave [Partner's Name] alone for a day or two. She calms down because she gets very angry during these fights, especially when I argue unnecessarily and do stupid things. One waits for lover for an hour, she was meeting the lover of a friend. While waiting for her, I could have done something else. Usually, I leave her alone for a couple of days. Then we go out, have dinner, and I tell her I realize my mistake and understand the problem, and we make up.

Interviewer: You mentioned that during such a conflict you first leave her alone and then resolve the conflicts. In addition to handling conflicts like this, what are other ways you maintain your relationship?

Speaker: Not making mistakes, controlling my jealousy and impatience. I'm a very impatient, punctual person and expect others to adapt to me. This impatience extends to my work, too. I get frustrated waiting, especially in traffic, where I often have anger issues. By curbing these traits, I can manage the relationship better. I need to work on my jealousy and patience.

Interviewer: Would you say this relationship is good for you?

Speaker: Absolutely.

Interviewer: Why?

Speaker: I laugh more. I'm happier than in my previous life. Even my body feels happier. I can feel that my body is happier. I'm very emotional. I hadn't cried in a long time, maybe [1-5] or [6-10] years. I didn't cry during my university years. But after meeting her, I cried out of emotional intensity. There was nothing wrong, I just cried out of the blue. That's when I felt I was in a good relationship because I truly loved her.

Interviewer: You mentioned laughing more and crying more. Can you give an example of when your emotions increased?

Speaker: I became more compassionate. Before, I was not this kind of person. My uncle died in front of my eyes, and I was the only one with him.

Interviewer: I'm sorry for your loss.

Speaker: Thank you. When I went to his shop, the nurse told me he had died. The man died while sitting. Even then, my heart turned to stone. While everyone was crying, I didn't cry. I might have had a shock, I don't remember, but I didn't cry during his funeral either. I wasn't an emotional person at all. I was heartless, really. I seemed heartless. When she came into my life, I started doing little good deeds for people, thinking more about people and my family. I missed the question again. I forgot the question again. I get lost in the events.

Interviewer: It's okay. These are very personal and emotional topics, so it's natural to lose track.

Speaker: Yes, yes. When you ask, I get lost in the events and start recounting them.

Interviewer: That's normal. I would do the same if I were on the other side. So, I was asking for concrete examples of when your emotions increased. You mentioned your uncle.

Speaker: Yes, I had turned to stone. I was acting like emotionless. But after [Partner's Name] came into my life, I started crying occasionally. I tear up even watching emotional videos sometimes. But I wasn't like this person at all before. Now, I'm a soft-hearted person. She made me very emotional. My hormones are showing themselves.

Interviewer: You said something closely related to my next question. Has this relationship changed you?

Speaker: Definitely. I was a very heartless person before. If someone died, I was behaving like this. But now, I can feel my heart more. I'm more compassionate. This relationship is changing my character slowly. People say people don't change, but everything changes. I changed many of my habits. I curbed many traits. Even If I can't change, at least I have curbed those traits. I don't express them.

Interviewer: Do you think [Partner's Name] has changed during the relationship?

Speaker: Of course. At first, there was a situation where I didn't express my jealousy. Then I started to say it slowly. At first, she couldn't handle it, but then she gradually adapted. I expressed it less, and she avoided doing things that bothered me, so we found a middle ground.

Interviewer: This is a similar question, but are you the same person now as you were before the relationship?

Speaker: No, not at all. I am very different.

Interviewer: Is [Partner's Name] the same person now as she was before the relationship?

Speaker: No, no. She is not the same either. Not at all. Even our sentences have changed. Our actions have changed. Our demeanor in environments has changed. Can I say something? Can you hear me?

Interviewer: Of course, I can hear you.

Speaker: Yes, I felt like the electricity went out, but one second.

Interviewer: Sure, I'm waiting. If you want, you can take as much time as you need.

Speaker: I think my room's light bulb burned out.

Interviewer: I'm very sorry.

Speaker: No, no, I fixed it. We can continue.

Interviewer: We can take a break if you want. You can change rooms or do whatever you need to do. We can continue in five minutes after I set up a new Zoom link. Does that work for you? Alright, then see you in five minutes. I will send a new Zoom link from another email address. Thank you very much in advance and sorry about the light bulb.

Speaker: Thank you. See you. Take care.

PART 2

Interviewer: Yes, where did we leave off? Yes, do you feel safe in this relationship?

Speaker: Yes, I mean yes, yes, yes, I feel it. Let me think a bit. I thought about it, yes, I can feel secure. There were times I didn't feel it initially. Of course, when we weren't settled, When I am talking about trust/secure (note: Secure and trust are synonyms in Turkish.), I mean the issue of separation, there is no such extraordinary situation right now, I mean honestly, she won't leave me right now.

Interviewer: Would you like to elaborate on why you said that?

Speaker: Which part?

Interviewer: I mean both why you feel secure now and why you didn't feel that way sometimes before, if you want to add.

Speaker: Well, [Partner's Name] once told me something. Well, we were sitting one day in [Month] of last year, in [Date], we had been dating for only [1-5] months. Well, she told me she wasn't sure about her love for me, that was one of our initial problems. I was in the [occupation] process then, we had a professional training at work. Well, I was interning at the [company] where I currently work. Well, I was insecure then, I couldn't trust, it wasn't happening, there was constant negativity, I couldn't sleep at night, my friendships were broken, and my relationship wasn't going well either. When she told me that, I didn't give up, I did everything to achieve something and win her over. But now it's the opposite, I trust her very much now because she forgives me even if I make mistakes, and I forgive her too.

Interviewer: Actually, the question was more about feeling secure in the relationship rather than trusting the partner. Can you give an example of how you feel secure in the relationship? I feel secure in the relationship, can you give an example? how do you define it for yourself?

Speaker: Well, actually...

Interviewer: Please, go ahead.

Speaker: I feel secure in the relationship, I felt emotionally strengthened, as I mentioned in our previous meeting, I felt emotionally strengthened, physically I feel stronger, really. I feel like a family man because our relationship has passed a year, we talk every day, we meet often. I feel like I have a wife, like I am married sometimes, it gives me security. I feel like a father sometimes, I try to protect her. I try to ensure the security of both myself and her in the relationship.

Interviewer: Can you give an example related to these feelings?

Speaker: For example... What can I say? I can't think of anything right now.

Interviewer: No problem, you can think a bit more if you want, we have time, at least I do.

Speaker: Yes, I have time too. I try to behave like a father, if we are in an insecure environment, I don't even let her go to the restroom alone. For example, it happened yesterday, our friends suggested we go to a place, a nice place, but it wasn't nice at all. To not upset them, we stayed, and she said she needed to go to the restroom, I said let's go together because it wasn't a safe place, there were unpleasant people where she would go to the restroom. I like approaching her like a father, you understand me, right?

Interviewer: Yes. If you don't want to elaborate more, I can move on to the next question.

Speaker: Sure, sure.

Interviewer: Alright, now I will ask a few questions, but these questions will be easier with a scale. Normally I had prepared these, but today I couldn't catch up so I wrote them again, sorry for my handwriting. Can you read the paper? If I ask you, "My partner usually listens to me," on a scale of one to nine, where one is "Not at all true" and nine is "completely true", which option do you think suits your situation the best?

Speaker: Nine, definitely. But would she answer this question? Is this your question?

Interviewer: Everyone gets the same questions.

Speaker: I think she would give a five or something.

Speaker: By the way, your door opened by itself.

Interviewer: There was a cat, yes.

Speaker: Okay, I was wondering what was happening, a bit paranormal.

Interviewer: Don't worry, yes, it's just a cat.

Speaker: Okay, because there are weird videos, it was like that suddenly with the door opening.

Interviewer: Yes, I understand, scary. No problem, I would be scared too, luckily I wasn't looking.

Interviewer: Another question, "My partner is usually responsive to my needs," from one to nine, one being "Not at all true" and nine being completely true, which option do you think fits your relationship?

Speaker: It's not perfect in this, I would give it a seven.

Interviewer: When I asked if your partner usually listens to you, you answered nine. Can you explain why you gave nine?

Speaker: She really listens to me very well, for example, I often daydream, so she might have given me a five or even a four, two, no matter. But she listens and remembers everything I say and definitely reminds me if something happens about it. That's why I gave nine.

Interviewer: Can you give concrete examples of when this happens, like when she listens well?

Speaker: You might laugh, but for example, during arguments, she never forgets. If I did something, she immediately tells me, like this and this happened. In daily life, for example, if I said I like something, like a food, she finds it on [Social Media], saves it, and suggests it for our weekend outing. I can understand she listens because of this.

Interviewer: Why not eight but nine for this question?

Speaker: She never surprised me because she always listens to everything I say, whether it's about clothes or emotions. Our relationship is very important to us, one of the most important things in our relationship. If we brought our relationship to this level, first, it's communication, then love, then respect, then interest. Since [Date] last year, she always listened to me, never disappointed me, always made me feel it. So making me feel it is enough for a nine.

Interviewer: Okay, another question, why did you give seven for "My partner is usually responsive to my needs"?

Speaker: I don't think she is perfect in that, not perfect but very good. She might have given me a nine for this, I think she would have. I have a hectic work and social life, she sometimes can't understand that, sometimes misses my needs. That's why I gave seven, if we were in school and both had the same routine, I would have given nine. But now she is still a student, and the work life is very different from student life because your time decreases a lot. Morning to night, you go out, come back, take a shower, eat, and you have no time left. So I gave seven. Needs were sometimes missed in this hectic schedule

Interviewer: Can you give examples of when these happen?

Speaker: Should I give examples from the negative side?

Interviewer: You can share if you want to share, examples that led you to give seven.

Speaker: Mmmm.. How should I give an example? She is always very thoughtful, really very thoughtful about my rest, my social needs. But sometimes I can feel that she can't understand that I am physically or mentally exhausted from work. For example, I wanted to rest the other day, I knew she really wanted to meet, but I really needed mental rest that day. I slightly felt her reaction to me not meeting her, even though she really wanted to, but I needed rest. This is an example. But it doesn't reflect badly on me, not in a bad way, just small things you can understand from phone conversations.

Interviewer: Lastly, why did you rate it seven instead of six or eight?

Speaker: I remembered the question. I scaled it in my mind like this: nine is 100% perfect, eight is close to perfect, and seven is very good. It's not close to perfect, nor perfect, so I said very good. Why not six, just good? She is very thoughtful, so I said very good, that's it. Not perfect, not close to perfect, but not just good either, so very good.

Interviewer: I hope it's okay to ask my next question, and please tell me if it's a sensitive topic for you, but I want to learn more about your physical closeness as a couple. How often do you have sexual intercourse these days?

Speaker: We haven't had sexual intercourse at all.

Interviewer: Okay, how satisfied are you with your sex life?

Speaker: I can't say any satisfaction about it, but [Partner's Name] doesn't expect that from me either, because neither of us is completely ready for it, I think. We need more time, there is no environment for us to get married yet. Not that it has to happen after marriage, but we need more time.

Interviewer: My next question, I want you to see the scale again. How satisfied are you with your relationship in general, from completely dissatisfied to completely satisfied? Can you choose the option that fits you best? You can see it, right?

Speaker: Yes, yes, I see it, okay. I am completely satisfied now, I mean completely satisfied.

Interviewer: If 0 is not at all satisfied and 10 was completely satisfied, how would you rate your satisfaction with your relationship?

Speaker: Ten. I'm satisfied right now. I have no problems for me right now. I mean, I am very satisfied in my work life, in my love life.

Interviewer: Okay. Actually you mentioned a little bit after giving ten but can you elaborate more on why you gave ten?

Speaker: I can feel it, she makes an effort for my happiness. I don't remember why, but my mood was very low, she tries very hard to lift my mood. I can feel her love, I can travel with her, have fun, even discuss economy. For example, we manage our finances together, I can do anything with her, there is no limit. That's why I am completely satisfied with my relationship. Because Sinem, love go only so far. Believe me, there are many beautiful women, but if you can't have a conversation, it's useless. Love is essential, but it goes only so far. Our communication and pushing each other to be better, that's important. We can encourage each other to be better. Even, I think you can get angry. You can get angry for the betterment of each other.

Interviewer: Why ten and not nine?

Speaker: There is no issue that bothers me right now. It's not like "let the snake that doesn't bite me live a thousand years." We are comfortable, no problem with her love, care, respect. No problem for me now, that's why I am completely satisfied.

Interviewer: Did your relationship meet your expectations?

Speaker: Yes, definitely. I was expecting someone like [Partner's Name] from the beginning. She can show herself to others, and before she entered my life, I wanted a woman like her. Definitely a woman like her, assertive, cheerful, who can make me happy and whom I can make happy, a relationship where we can be stronger together. Definitely what I expected in my life.

Interviewer: Lastly, were you comfortable answering these questions?

Speaker: Of course, very comfortable.

Interviewer: We are about to end our interview. I want to summarize what we discussed in the last hour. [Portion Redacted] You mentioned some qualities of a quality relationship like respect and thoughtfulness, and some negative aspects like arguments and toxicity. You talked about the importance of thoughtfulness, expressing love. And you mentioned that it is actually valuable to take time out of her busy time. Love is about doing everything for each other and is the most important thing. You mentioned both parties changed after entering the relationship, and communication is very important. Love, communication, and pushing each other forward are crucial dynamics in a relationship. Is this correct, and do you want to add anything?

Speaker: Absolutely correct, I don't have anything to add. I already gave short explanations with examples. Everything is correct. The foundation of my relationship with [Partner's Name] is communication, love, and care.

Interviewer: Thank you very much, [Participant's Name]. Before we end, I want to inform you about how we will handle the data. As a research project, we aim to be as transparent as possible. So, I want to explain the data sharing options to you, and you can choose what suits you. The first option is to share some parts of the interview transcript. None of these parts will contain identifiable information. This anonymized transcript can be read by other researchers. The second option is to share the entire interview transcript, with sensitive and identifiable details removed. This option carries a small risk that someone who knows you well could piece together who you are, but no sensitive information will be shared. Which of these options do you prefer?

Speaker: I prefer the first option.

Interviewer: Okay. Thank you very much for participating in this study. This study is also being conducted in the Philippines, Brazil, the Netherlands, France, and the USA. To make this study successful, if it's okay with you, I have one last request. Could you send the names of two close people in your life as candidates? We will ask them to suggest other couples who might be interested in this study. We will also ask them to recommend couples they don't know personally. This way, we can reach as many diverse participants as possible. Is this okay with you?

Speaker: I need to ask them. Can I text you on [Social Media] after asking?

Interviewer: Sure, of course.

Speaker: I can't do it without asking them.

Interviewer: Of course, I understand. Once you have asked and if they agree, you can share their contact information with me on [Social Media].

Interviewer: Thank you very much for your contribution.

Speaker: Today or tomorrow. Can it be one couple?

Interviewer: Yes, it can be. The marital status doesn't matter for us.

Speaker: Okay, I will ask at work then.

Interviewer: Thank you very much again. If you don't have anything else to share, I can end our recording now.

Okay, that's fine.

Interviewer: Alright, ending the recording.
