

Speaker 1 [00:00:04] Good day. Thank you again for participating in this interview. As mentioned over text, we want to know more about your views on romantic relationships and we believe your experience and perspective would bring much to the project before you. Before we begin. Is it alright if we record this interview? We'll only use it for transcription note taking.

Speaker 2 [00:00:26] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:00:29] I can start off by asking you how old you are.

Speaker 2 [00:00:33] [36-40].

Speaker 1 [00:00:35] And how long have you been together with your partner?

Speaker 2 [00:00:39] Almost [11-15] years. So maybe [11-15] years.

Speaker 1 [00:00:43] Would you say, [11-15] years of being married?

Speaker 2 [00:00:49] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:00:52] Okay. Do you have any children?

Speaker 2 [00:00:55] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:00:56] How many children do you have? And who lives in your household.

Speaker 2 [00:01:03] My mother, my husband, my daughter and my son and myself.

Speaker 1 [00:01:09] And what is your main source of income?

Speaker 2 [00:01:14] My husband's business.

Speaker 1 [00:01:17] What is your current job?

Speaker 2 [00:01:20] I'm an [Job Title].

Speaker 1 [00:01:23] How would you like us to address your partner? Boyfriend, partner. Lover. Husband.

Speaker 2 [00:01:30] Husband.

Speaker 1 [00:01:31] So can you start off by telling me your love story?

[Portion Redacted]

Speaker 1 [00:02:30] Okay. How would you compare the quality of your relationship compared to that of your friends relationship? And why would you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:02:43] I would say that my relationship now is not so great. Of course, some of my friends also don't have great relationships after being married so long, but I feel like all marriages have ups and downs. The quality of relationship. I mean, there's many different aspects to that. I mean, financially, things are great. Emotionally, not so much. But my friends have other issues. So I think it just all depends. And you never really know what happens behind closed doors in other people's relationships.

Speaker 1 [00:03:27] So you say they have problems, but they're different problems from you and your husband.

Speaker 2 [00:03:33] Correct. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:03:38] And can I also ask how many romantic partners you've had in the past?

Speaker 2 [00:03:47] Maybe [6-10].

Speaker 1 [00:03:50] Okay. [6-10]?

Speaker 1 [00:03:53] And now how would you compare the quality of your relationship compared to your previous relationships and why would you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:04:04] It's kind of hard to compare them because my previous relationships was when I was a teenager and I got married very young. But obviously, as everyone they compare. An interesting question asks, because I was so young, I feel like in my past relationships there is more of an emotional connection than my married relationship. My married relationship almost sometimes feels like it's a business.

Speaker 1 [00:04:43] And how would you say how would you describe it as being a business?

Speaker 2 [00:04:51] We're here to raise our children and do what's best for them. So we are not very emotionally connected. For the majority of the years we've been together and it's more financial and taking care of our children. Well for me it is.

Speaker 1 [00:05:18] And the.

Speaker 2 [00:05:20] Other.

Speaker 1 [00:05:21] Sorry. What was that?

Speaker 2 [00:05:22] That. And we have businesses together, so. It just all kind of seems the same.

Speaker 1 [00:05:29] Yeah, for sure. For you. What makes a relationship high quality and what makes a relationship low quality? And why would you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:05:41] Can you repeat the question.

Speaker 1 [00:05:43] Please? I'll start off with the first question for you. What makes your relationship high quality and why do you say so.

Speaker 2 [00:05:51] In a relationship in general or this relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:05:55] For you?

Speaker 2 [00:05:58] High quality relationship would be doing things together as a couple and communication. Passion. Holly Passion really is the number one. Would be more of a high quality relationship for me.

Speaker 1 [00:06:25] And what would you say would be a low quality relationship for you?

Speaker 2 [00:06:31] Not spending time together, not doing things together, not having things in common? Yeah, that kind of just leads to all of the other things, like not being able. You don't communicate, you don't have things to communicate about. If you don't have things in common.

Speaker 1 [00:06:53] So you said the high quality relationship. You are compassionate. Can you tell me more about how one knows that they're in a compassionate relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:07:08] I think it's just the feeling you have when you see that person. When you talk to that person, you wake up with that person the next in the morning. It's just that it's you want to be with them, I think. Ah, well, you said compassionate, so. You feel you feel their pain when they're having a bad day. You know, you want to try to make them not have a bad day and cheer them up no matter how your day is. And I don't know. I think you just look towards that other person more than yourself.

Speaker 1 [00:07:45] And when would you say your relationship was compassionate and when was it the least compassionate?

Speaker 2 [00:07:57] The least compassionate would probably be. Most of the [26-30] years. But there was about [1-5] years in our relationship. I guess maybe now in the beginning, maybe the [1st-5th] year or so. It was because it was new. It was compassionate. And then we went on to really just living our own lives for the most part. But there was about [1-5 years, about [6-10] years ago, that things turned around and was more compassionate.

Speaker 1 [00:08:35] And in the first [6-10] years of your relationship.

Speaker 2 [00:08:41] Probably just the first year, I would say after that it became more. We were just always doing our own thing. We were never really together.

Speaker 1 [00:08:50] Okay. Would you say that is because the burden of adult responsibilities or children?

Speaker 2 [00:08:59] Um, maybe. I mean, for my part I just focused on raising my children and I didn't work, so I'd got to raise my children, and they were my huge focus. For him, his huge focus is financial, also making money. And that's what And so that's how we just kind of live separate lives, but together. So I raised our family and or our children, and then he made sure we were financially provided for.

Speaker 1 [00:09:34] Okay. And so I know you touched on some things in your previous answer, but I want to ask you again. For you. What is the most important thing in a relationship and why do you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:09:53] Most important. Is really just love. And when I say love, I mean being in love.

Speaker 1 [00:10:03] Okay. Elaborate on what you think being in love is.

Speaker 2 [00:10:08] Yes. So I think the difference is being in love is, again, like I previously said, was you just want you want that person to be happy and not that you're willing to give up yourself for that person, but you also you're not trying to make that person's day harder. If they're having a hard day, you're trying to make it a little bit a little bit better. And you know you're not going to sit here and fight with them when they come home, sad or angry or stressed out, You're going to help alleviate some of that stress. Loving someone is a mean. You can love a lot of people. And it there's limits, though, when it comes to loving someone. Just loving someone but being in love with someone, you'd almost do anything for them. And that's what I think are my differences.

Speaker 1 [00:11:03] What do you think the limits are to loving someone?

Speaker 2 [00:11:08] Well, I mean, you can love someone. That doesn't mean you're going to do absolutely, absolutely anything for them. You know, it's we think of a better way to put it. I was going to say you would kill for someone, but that's not really reality. But that's kind of, you know, how I feel. Like you would just do anything for them. Loving someone is. Yeah, sure. I'll do that for you tomorrow or when I say limits, it's you're not going to always bend over backwards. But you love them because they bring many things to your life. But I don't know. And love is a whole different feeling. Not. I'm sure I know what that is.

Speaker 1 [00:11:56] Do you think that there's times where you can be in love or just love somebody throughout a relationship where it can switch back and forth?

Speaker 2 [00:12:06] Absolutely.

Speaker 1 [00:12:08] Yeah, well, how would you know that? You are totally in love with this person if it does switch back and forth.

Speaker 2 [00:12:17] I think like that [1-5] years of well, the first year, the first year of being together and then that [1-5] years when I fell in love again or being in love again was just I enjoyed my time. Our time together. We would go on vacations together and we would do lots of things together. And our relationship was more fun and it was more like we were a couple opposed to just roommates, business partners, Partners.

Speaker 1 [00:12:50] Okay, that makes sense. So for you, what is love? I know we kind of touched on that, but. You want to go over it again?

Speaker 2 [00:13:00] As in being in love or being just loving someone.

Speaker 1 [00:13:05] How you interpret it. Whatever you think.

Speaker 2 [00:13:08] I mean, love is. I love lots of people. I love all my family. And but again, I wouldn't, I wouldn't always go out of my way for them, which I do love them, but that's a hard one. Not really sure. I mean, because then there's the love for my children, which. I would jump off a bridge for them. So also, that's like extreme love. To me, the different forms of love are how extreme things are and there's only certain people that I really do love. But I mean, in a relationship wise, being in love is, I think, the most important.

Speaker 1 [00:13:55] So some of what you're saying is love. Love is ultimately how much you're willing to sacrifice.

Speaker 2 [00:14:05] Um, I think the different degrees of love. Yes. If that makes sense.

Speaker 1 [00:14:12] Yes. Like in love versus just loving somebody.

Speaker 2 [00:14:17] Right. I mean, because I'm not in love with my children like that, but I would do more for them than anybody in my entire life. But then there's the person you are in love with in a relationship. Then I suppose I would probably do almost anything for them, too. But then there's just like your love for your aunt. So your uncles or your cousins and stuff like that. I'm not jumping off a bridge for them.

Speaker 1 [00:14:46] Yeah. So it sounds like In Love is more of a romantic love for you.

Speaker 2 [00:14:51] Yes. Okay. Good way to put it.

Speaker 1 [00:14:55] And how important is romantic love in a relationship or just love in general?

Speaker 2 [00:15:03] I think romantic love is the most important thing in a relationship, because I think once you're romantically in love, then all the things that should come with a relationship will automatically happen. Being faithful, being loyal, you know, all those things. Being beat, just being that other person's. Being there. Being there. What's the word I'm looking for? More like their companion or their other half that's being in love. And if you don't have that, then you kind of lose some of those other priorities, all those things that you really think should be happening in a relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:15:52] So you'd said that love in a relationship is above those, as you said, loyalty, trust. It's a lot more important than those. Those factors.

Speaker 2 [00:16:10] Yes, because I think with looks, I think love is on the top and then all the other ones just come naturally when you're in love.

Speaker 1 [00:16:18] Okay, that makes sense. How do you know your partner loves you?

Speaker 2 [00:16:25] Um. Well. I think actions are more important than words when it comes to. Do I know my partner loves me? Yes, because I do believe he would do anything for me. But I also think. It's a different kind of love, and I'm not really sure how to explain that because I can't I can't really explain him as much or what he thinks. But when I think when it becomes your own self, your own selfish actions come first, then to me, that's not love. You love yourself in the way you feel more than you love your partner. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:17:18] So you say that him showing you that he loves you more than himself is how he shows you his love and in the relationship.

Speaker 2 [00:17:36] Yes. Yes. Yes. I don't think I found somebody who loved them and I think it means anything. What was your trip? I think it's actions. Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:17:51] Well, what would you say are challenges in your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:17:57] Well that was one of them was just more of the selfish acts of I don't agree with something but he does that anyway because it's self satisfying to him. And. That's really it. I think the biggest one is just more. Is his selfishness.

Speaker 1 [00:18:29] Like being inconsiderate of your feelings.

Speaker 2 [00:18:33] Yes. And everything is always about him and how he feels.

Speaker 1 [00:18:40] So do you and your partner fight? And how often would you say you fight?

Speaker 2 [00:18:49] Within the last year. I would say we fight a lot. Probably every week to two weeks. Previously? Once. Twice a year, maybe.

Speaker 1 [00:19:06] And what are these fights about lately?

Speaker 2 [00:19:09] Because I have now disconnected myself emotionally, and I'm just not connected into the relationship anymore at all. And he, of course, wants me to be connected into the relationship. Previously. It was just stupid stuff.

Speaker 1 [00:19:32] And resolve these fights.

Speaker 2 [00:19:37] He just doesn't talk to me for days. So they don't really get resolved. They get involved.

Speaker 1 [00:19:47] Until they just talk again.

Speaker 2 [00:19:49] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:19:51] And does anything prompt that?

Speaker 2 [00:19:54] I. Well, usually, yes. Usually it's me just trying to make the conversation again about business or something like that. And then he eventually decides to start talking to me.

Speaker 1 [00:20:09] Okay. Aside from your current fights, what are other ways you maintain your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:20:23] Like, how do we keep our relationship going? Well. His big thing is sex. I'm just not really sure that I do that anymore. Keep our relationship going. It's just. I'm here. And. Hmm. I mean, I guess it's just. Continue in the day to day life activities if we are to go out socializing with other people or. You know, not really sure, because we kind of live two separate lives right now.

Speaker 1 [00:21:08] Okay. Previously, I'd say maybe after this year, how would you maintain or before this year, how would you maintain your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:21:21] Going out socially with other people ourselves, going to dinner or just doing things together. Watching TV together. It's just doing things together.

Speaker 1 [00:21:35] Would you say the relationship is good for you and why would you say that?

Speaker 2 [00:21:41] Currently, I say no, the relationship is not. And it's just because emotionally I'm not in the relationship anymore. So it causes more damage to me mentally than. Before.

Speaker 1 [00:22:00] Okay. And when you say emotionally damaging, how can you give an example.

Speaker 2 [00:22:08] More like depression?

Speaker 1 [00:22:11] From like a fight or.

Speaker 2 [00:22:15] No, just the every day now of being in a relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:22:20] Okay was not something specific.

Speaker 2 [00:22:25] No, it's just. Well, I mean, many things have occurred to get me to this point in life. And so that's where it becomes more just. You're kind of done. But it's not that easy.

Speaker 1 [00:22:42] Yeah. Ending our relationship is never easy.

Speaker 2 [00:22:47] Right?

Speaker 1 [00:22:48] Did the relationship change you and in what way? If so?

Speaker 2 [00:22:55] Over the course of many years. But yeah, it definitely has changed me. I got married when I was [16-20] years old, so just growing as a person over all those years, growing as a person with another person. And so as life has changed me, of course, being in a relationship and a marriage and learning how to be a wife and learning how to be a mother and doing all those things over a course of years. Yes, you change a lot and then sometimes you even lose who you are as a person.

Speaker 1 [00:23:33] In what ways would you say? Have you changed?

Speaker 2 [00:23:38] I matured. I found love that I didn't know existed. Namely for my children, more than my relationship but you just. You also. You don't have children. Not all people. But when you have children, like I don't argue as much anymore. I don't fight as much. I kind of let the arguments go instead of. Standing up for what I believe in and just let it go and don't say anything at all, because I'd never wanted to fight in front of my children and they don't need to see all that. All that. Animosity. So that's why I say you also lose yourself a little bit. And you kind of end up doing things that you don't want to do, which I think is normal in every relationship. Which also shows love and respect. But yeah, I think it's just you kind of become more of the person that they are. Expect you to be all yours. Until you are grown up, and then you just start to find yourself again.

Speaker 1 [00:25:10] And what about your partner? Did they change during the relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:25:15] Yes, a little bit. I mean, over the years, a little bit less aggressive. For a while. I kind of calmed down. Trying to think of the words would be the right word, but not as. Not as argumentative, but also. I don't think he has changed as much as I have. Just I think as he gets older, that changes him.

Speaker 1 [00:25:53] But it wasn't because of your relationship, you'd say.

Speaker 2 [00:25:58] Probably, I would think. No.

Speaker 1 [00:26:02] Do you feel safe in the relationship? And why do you say so? And safety could be. Being able to open up to your partner about your experiences, thoughts, identity, identity without fear of judgment. Also, the expectation that the other will offer comfort and caring in times of danger or distress. And it could be either physical or emotional.

Speaker 2 [00:26:30] Eh emotion. I mean, physically safe. Yes, for the most part. As long as. Yes. Yes. It feels emotionally I mean, physically safe, emotionally safe sometimes depending on the topic. I can confide in him on a lot of things and not be judged. But then there's a lot of times I am judged for opening up about, ah, just doing certain things.

Speaker 1 [00:27:10] Would you be able—

Speaker 2 [00:27:11] To sample like if I like to go out socially partying or something like that, then I'm judged. If I drink, I'm judged. If. But also if I have an encounter with someone, a friend or something like that, then he'd be more supportive in that aspect. Like if I know if me and my friend have a disagreement or something or I don't agree with something. And that type of emotional support, he's there. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:27:49] And do you feel you feel comfortable talking to them about your emotions?

Speaker 2 [00:27:58] Yes, but I'm not sure that they're really heard. Look.

Speaker 1 [00:28:05] So from one to not true at all and nine completely true. If you were to ask, my partner usually really listens to me, what would your answer be? Again, ranging from one not true at all to somewhat true. Moderately true. Very true. And completely true. On a scale of 1 to 9. My partner listens to me.

Speaker 2 [00:28:34] Four.

Speaker 1 [00:28:36] Four. So you put yourself in between somewhat true and moderately true.

Speaker 2 [00:28:43] Let's go with three.

Speaker 1 [00:28:45] Somewhat true. Okay. And what about if I ask you, my partner usually is responsive to my needs from the same scale of 1 to 9. One. Not true at all. Someone. So in between. Not true at all. And somewhat true or somewhat true.

Speaker 2 [00:29:15] Two.

Speaker 1 [00:29:17] So in between. Not not true and somewhat true. Right between. So why did you answer? Somewhat true that my partner usually really listens to me. And could you give me an example?

Speaker 2 [00:29:38] Somewhat. He listens to me. Was that the first question or the second one?

Speaker 1 [00:29:48] So the first question was my partner usually really listens to me. And why did you put somewhat true and if you can give me an example.

Speaker 2 [00:29:59] So. If it's a topic of conversation that he is interested in, he will listen. If it is not, then he doesn't listen. And I think it's a lot of times he's in his own head, so he doesn't hear anything I say.

Speaker 1 [00:30:18] Can you give me an example of something you would sure like yesterday?

Speaker 2 [00:30:26] I was trying to book him on a flight and I was asking him if he wanted to take the earlier flight so that he could possibly be upgraded and I put the airline agent on hold and went and asked and he said, no, I don't want to have a longer layover. So then I didn't change his plane ticket. And when. About 30 minutes later, he asked me again about that situation. And then he said, No, I want to I'd rather go earlier. And I said, Well, I asked you when I was on the phone with the agent if you wanted me to change it. And you told me no. And I explained it to you three times just so you would be listening. And he still didn't listen. And so he wanted to change his plane ticket. But apparently, the first three times I said it, he didn't understand what I was saying. I going? Listen.

Speaker 1 [00:31:29] Does he blame you for not listening or does he take.

Speaker 2 [00:31:35] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:31:36] I'm responsible. He blames you?

Speaker 2 [00:31:39] Mm hmm.

Speaker 1 [00:31:40] And that's what causes the frustration?

Speaker 2 [00:31:43] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:31:45] And. Why did you answer? Between not true at all and not at all true to somewhat true to my partner is usually responsive to my needs.

Speaker 2 [00:32:04] I do not believe. Well, anything by it when I tell him my needs or feelings and. It's just I think he has good intentions, but he really doesn't know how to be about anyone but himself. And so it does. Sorry, it doesn't. It doesn't happen. So if I say I don't want this. I think he has it like, say, if I don't want someone to stay at my house, which is in need of mine, that I don't want people in my house staying here. I think his feelings overtake what my needs are. So he has good intentions. He doesn't really want them to stay, but his need for acceptance and doing good overrules how I feel. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:33:05] That was a good example. I hope you don't mind if I ask. And feel free to say this is too sensitive for you to share, but also want to know more about your physical intimacy as a couple these days. How often do you have sex? Again, you don't have to answer anything that makes you feel uncomfortable.

Speaker 2 [00:33:28] Maybe once a month. But that's more in recent. The recent months.

Speaker 1 [00:33:36] Was it different previously?

Speaker 2 [00:33:39] Five days a week previously.

Speaker 1 [00:33:42] Like you'd you would have sex five times a week.

Speaker 2 [00:33:45] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:33:46] And it was after this past year.

Speaker 2 [00:33:49] It was probably be within the last [1-5] months that it has lessened.

Speaker 1 [00:33:56] Okay. And how satisfied are you with your sex life and why do you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:34:04] I am not. And it's more because I'm not emotionally connected into this relationship. And all of the passion and desire is gone. So that's as is not feels. Nothing like I feel nothing.

Speaker 1 [00:34:25] Lou, back to the answer. Important things in our relationship. Would you believe that sex is an important thing in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:34:36] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:34:37] It's one of the most important things. Or how would you scale it?

Speaker 2 [00:34:42] No, not the one of the most probably. I'd probably say it's like maybe third or fourth down the list of more important things. But I feel like it's just it's part of an intimacy. And I don't know, you feel a little connected when you have sex. But you also need the other things that were above that to get to that point, right? I mean, again, I can have sex, but I'm not emotionally connected. I'm not in love. I have no. You have no desire to be there. So sex feels nothing. So the intimacy part isn't there. But if I was in love or I had the desire to be there, then sex is like a huge thing, I think.

Speaker 1 [00:35:36] So it seems like you're saying that sex is important for you when it is emotionally.

Speaker 2 [00:35:44] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:35:46] Yes, it's more intimate. Okay. So for the next question, I'm going to send you just a little list to prompt. So you can remember. But in general, how satisfied are you with your relationship from a range of completely dissatisfied, varied, assess, dissatisfied, somewhat dissatisfied, unsure. Slice neutral, somewhat satisfied, very satisfied and completely satisfied. And again I sent. The range in the chat.

Speaker 2 [00:36:26] I am completely dissatisfied. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:36:33] So completely dissatisfied. How would from a scale. So if negative ten is completely dissatisfied and zero is not not at all dissatisfied. How would you relate your saddest vacation with your relationship? And is completely dissatisfied and zero is not is not at all dissatisfied.

Speaker 2 [00:37:11] A negative ten.

Speaker 1 [00:37:14] Okay. And why would you say negative? Why would you answer negative ten?

Speaker 2 [00:37:24] Because I'm in a relationship I don't want to be in and I have no emotional connection anymore.

Speaker 1 [00:37:32] Okay, so you'd say that. Your relationship? Did your relationship fulfill your expectations?

Speaker 2 [00:37:41] My relationship, still my expectations. Yes or no? I mean, I got it. I do have a beautiful life, I'm missing that emotional connection to a partner. Okay, I mean, I just don't have the emotional connection to my husband. Which I think is important.

Speaker 1 [00:38:10] Okay. So you'd say it somewhat. Somewhat fulfilled your expectations.

Speaker 2 [00:38:20] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:38:22] All right. So we're close to wrapping up, and I'd like to summarize what we have converse about in the past hour. So [portion redacted] you're not sure of the maturity or being in a relationship may be both has changed you, but at this point in your life, you're there for more materialistic things and you're working on trying to find. You're emotional love and it's not with him. So what I'm hearing is you're not satisfied at all with your relationship. You're not satisfied with your sex life. Emotionally, you're mostly satisfied with what you guys have built with your children and the businesses. And was it? Was that right? Is there anything else you'd like to add?

Speaker 2 [00:39:26] No, I think that all sums it up.

Speaker 1 [00:39:30] Well, thank you so much. Now, before we end, I would like to talk to you about how we handle the data. As a research project, we want to be as ethically and transparent as possible. And so I want you to know which data sharing options you are most comfortable with. Option one is that transcript proportion can be shared, none of which can be identified to you. So the de-identified transcript can also be read by other researchers. And so that pretty much means anything very sensitive or anything that would be like to you, like somebody would know it's you wouldn't be discussed. It would just be for researchers' discussion. And then the second option, if you were older, another option is that the whole transcript can be shared, removing sensitive and overly identifying details such as your name. So it'd be anonymous. Although in this option there is very minimal chance of someone who knows you can well piece together the details in the transcript and narrow down who among their colleagues they believe it is. Although again, no sensitive information will be shared. So this one. Basically, if somebody very close to you read it, you may be able to tell it's you, but no names and no sensitive information to identify. You wouldn't be there. But if you're like you said, like a mother, children would read it, they may know it is you in your relationship. But it's up to you. Which option?

Speaker 2 [00:41:24] Many go with option one.

Speaker 1 [00:41:26] Option one. Okay. I sent you the consent form so we could just like that box. I wish I could tell you how to do it too, afterwards, but I want to thank you so much again for participating in this study. I would like you to know that this is also being done in the Philippines, Brazil, Netherlands, France and the US for this study to be successful. There's also one more thing. We will ask you if that is okay for you. Can you recommend close people in your life as a nominator? We would ask them additional for additional couples that might be interested in the study, but will be asking them for couples that you don't know or interact with. This way, we could get a diverse network as we can get. Is that okay with you for your referencing? Yes. Your people to me?

Speaker 2 [00:42:28] Yes.

Speaker 1 [00:42:29] And. Thank you. We will be contacting them as soon as you get back, As soon as you get to them.

Speaker 2 [00:42:39] Well.

Speaker 1 [00:42:40] I'll also be grateful if you can give them a heads up that you will be contacting them about this so they don't block us or, you know, so they know what's up, what's going on. So anyways, that concludes it. And thank you again for participating in the study. I will. Thank you.
