

Speaker 1 [00:00:00] Okay, cool. Let's get started. Okay. So, hi. Thank you so much again for participating in this interview. As I mentioned over email and text, we want to know more about your views on romantic relationships and we believe your experience and perspective would bring much to this project. I already asked this, but I need to ask again for the recording. Would it be all right if we record this interview? We will only use it for. Okay. Also. So just for some demographic questions. How old are you?

Speaker 2 [00:00:31] I'm currently [20-25] years old.

Speaker 1 [00:00:33] Nice. How long have you been together with your partner?

Speaker 2 [00:00:37] We began officially dating. We began officially dating in [Month] of [Year]. We met in [Month], so I'd say we've probably been dating for. Gosh, [<1 year] now.

Speaker 1 [00:00:53] Great. Do you have children?

Speaker 2 [00:00:56] No, we do not.

Speaker 1 [00:00:58] Okay. And who lives in your household?

Speaker 2 [00:01:01] Me and my partner. Just the two of us. And a lizard.

Speaker 1 [00:01:05] I don't have a lizard, but that's really great. And what is your main source of income, or what is your current job?

Speaker 2 [00:01:13] Yeah. You mean for me personally and for our whole household?

Speaker 1 [00:01:17] Just for you personally.

Speaker 2 [00:01:19] For me personally. I'm currently working. I work in a [company] about [x] hours a week or so.

Speaker 1 [00:01:26] Cool. Yeah. And how would you like us to address your partner? It could be like girlfriend, partner, lover. Just by their new partner.

Speaker 2 [00:01:34] Partner works well. Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:01:36] Partner. Okay, great. Okay, awesome. So that's enough of the demographic questions. So we're gonna move on to some context setting. Can you tell me about your love story?

Speaker 2 [00:01:49] So we met through a mutual friend of ours. The two of them went to high school together and me and our mutual friend, we went to college together. We lived down the hall from each other. So we met [year]. Eventually, my partner [Partner's Name] is her name. She came down to [Location] to visit where I was going to college at the time, and we met for the first time, even though I had heard all kinds of stories about her. We just kind of hit it off. Kept talking for a while. I came up here to [City], where she lives in order to visit and just hang out. And then after about [<1 year] of visiting each other and driving back and forth, we were like, Are we dating now? I guess, Sure. So we started dating. Started seeing more of each other, spent like some a lot of time together during school breaks for me, and then made the decision to move in together, I think around [Month] earlier [year]. Yeah. We made that decision to move in together, found an apartment, and then moved in together in [Month]. That's kind of where we're up to now. I hope that's like the descriptor of what you were looking for.

Speaker 1 [00:03:08] Yeah. No, that's perfect. That's great. I really enjoyed your story. I always love listening to people's stories about how they met and everything. It's always super interesting, but yeah, thanks for sharing that.

Speaker 2 [00:03:20] Of course.

Speaker 1 [00:03:21] And we're going to move on to something a little different now. How would you compare the quality of your relationship compared to that of your friends relationships?

Speaker 2 [00:03:30] Oh, that's a really good question. I would say my partner and I have a really, really healthy relationship. We have a lot of two way communication. I think we're very much on the same page about a lot of things. And I don't mean to cast judgment on my friends or anything, but I feel like my partner and I are very direct to each other compared to how I see some couples. I we're we're 100% honest about pretty much everything. We're always communicative, checking in on each other's needs, but also like. Just checking in in general, making sure that things are good. We're very vocal about a lot of that kind of stuff, too. I think we're both the kind of people we don't really like to let our connection go unspoken, so we make a strong effort to say that out loud. And I don't see other couples doing that quite as much. Yeah. Being so forward about, you know, just saying I love you often or like expressing very literally, like how happy you are being with that person. That's something that's important for both of us that I don't see in a lot of relationships.

Speaker 1 [00:04:42] Yeah, I think it's really great that you had that going for you guys. That sounds really awesome. Can I ask how many romantic partners you've had in the past?

Speaker 2 [00:04:52] Hmm. That is a great question. I have to count. Sorry. Give me a minute.

Speaker 1 [00:05:01] It's Okay.

Speaker 2 [00:05:06] I would say [6-10] romantic partners in the past year. [6-10] romantic partners total [1-5] Not counting my current relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:05:14] Got it. Got it. That makes sense. Yeah. And how would you compare the quality of your relationship currently to that of your previous relationships?

Speaker 2 [00:05:22] This is easily the happiest relationship I've ever been in, for sure. I think that's a maturity thing on both of our parts. Just because, you know, we're both like adults now versus dating in high school or early college and that sort of thing. But yeah, definitely the highest quality relationship that I've I've ever been in.

Speaker 1 [00:05:43] Yeah, that's awesome. And for you, what makes a relationship high quality or low quality?

Speaker 2 [00:05:51] I think it's about. Being naturally kind of at ease with one another. Being in tune with each other's habits and behavior is giving that person grace and kind of room to be their own person. That kind of stuff is super important to me versus like in a more unhappy relationship where your habits are kind of at odds with each other. You're maybe not so direct about fixing those sort of problems. I think that leads to a much higher quality relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:06:27] Yeah. Yeah, that makes sense. And can you tell me about when you would say, like, your relationship was highest quality? Or maybe it was like, least, like, lowest quality. Maybe, like, give examples.

Speaker 2 [00:06:42] Of, like, current relationship or.

Speaker 1 [00:06:44] Your current relationship if there's, like, things that you think maybe like you're having a hard time finding those examples, that's totally fine too.

Speaker 2 [00:06:50] But no, no, no, that's fine. I think we have. I will be going to. The highest point has been, honestly, just the last couple of months of living together because we were long distance for the first several months of our relationship. So actually spending so much time together very directly. I mean, most of the time that we spent with each other, we still kind of in one another's homes, like in their space. So it doesn't feel that weird, like living together excuse me necessarily, but it definitely feels different to have that situation all the time. And it's really fantastic for both of us just to be in the same place at the same time. I mean, lowest quality, I couldn't really say. I mean, probably the least. Over this past summer, I was working across the country with [Name] down in [City], which I'm sure if you know her, you've probably heard a little bit about that at least now. But that's to say that, I mean, we were still communicating the whole time. It wasn't like we were arguing or going through anything. But I mean, that was probably we weren't seeing each other at all because I was across the country for [1-5] months straight. We were just sharing letters and texting and that sort of thing. And it was a little stressful, I think. But we just kept open communication and kept talking to each other. Yeah, it was not so much like a difficult time borne out of like any conflict or anything between the two of us. It was just like that was our kind of living and communication situation. And it was probably like the, the rockiest I would say it's ever been just not seeing each other at all for three months.

Speaker 1 [00:08:45] Yeah, that makes sense. And that sounds quite difficult, but. Yeah. And for you, like, what are the most important things in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:08:59] I think like I mentioned before, having similar habits helps a lot and that can go for a lot of things. Liking the same kind of foods is one, you know. Stuff like that or. Yeah. Whether you like to drink or not or whether you like to stay up late or whether you're a morning person. I think those kinds of like base compatibility things are really huge for me just in terms of feeling comfortable and kind of at ease in a relationship. But I think on a bigger level too having the same kind of philosophical approach to life in terms of big milestones and sort of the way that you walk about the world, the things that you find important. She and I, we both find things like nature very, very important, and we put a lot of our focus into that. And that kind of thing is super important for me in a relationship as having similar passions. You don't have to be exactly the same. You know, you're going to have different hobbies and different things are going to call to you in different ways. But. Having a love for really emotional things like music and cooking that that's super important to me in a relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:10:13] Yeah. Yeah, that's a really good answer. And I really like that. We're going to shift gears again for you, what is love?

Speaker 2 [00:10:24] Hmm. Baby, don't hurt me. I think love is kind of just the idea of being with a person that is your person, you know? And, you know, being a companion for someone I think is really what it boils down to. You know, like in every sense of that, I think that love and romantic partners for each other should be a companion in every sense of the word, you know, helping each other out. Sharing similar interests and passions, encouraging the other person to take on their passions. I think bringing the best out of each other in a way that makes both of you happy, I think that's love.

Speaker 1 [00:11:17] Yeah. Yeah. I love, I love that. Uh huh. And how important is love in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:11:25] I think pretty important for sure. Because I mean, especially. So some people will say very different things than this. But personally, what I think is if you're in a relationship, you're kind of exploring where that relationship is going to take you in the long run. Right. I mean, I've definitely been in life situations where I wasn't looking for a long term relationship, but I think like at the end of the day, love is an important part of any relationship that you want to be long lasting. If you don't want a relationship to be long lasting, you know, I've been in phases of my life where I'm looking for a short term relationship and I'm upfront about that sort of thing while I'm single. But I think if you're looking for a partner, like a proper romantic relationship that's going to last you a long time, then love is super important.

Speaker 1 [00:12:24] Yeah. Yeah. And how do you know that your partner loves you?

Speaker 2 [00:12:30] Rural communication, I think is a big one. I mentioned that earlier that we're just really direct about that sort of thing. And also just the way I think speaking the same love languages, you know, there's different ideas about what the different love languages are. I think that's a thing with a lot of misconceptions about it and a lot of fake kind of science sounding things about like, Oh, the seven love languages. Like it's, it's kind of made up. But I do think that. Specific things do make sense off of those sorts of lists. Right. So I think one big thing for us is acts of service. We both love cooking for each other, doing little things like getting coffee ready for one another in the morning. I think that's a really essential part of compatibility. Sorry, I kind of drifted. I forget what tangent of the question we started on.

Speaker 1 [00:13:26] Oh, no. Just how do you know that your partner loves you?

Speaker 2 [00:13:29] Yeah. So, like, using those things, like acts of service and speaking those love languages, I think. Practicing those sorts of habits.

Speaker 1 [00:13:41] Definitely. And you mentioned communication. When would say that you had good communication. And what happened then?

Speaker 2 [00:13:51] I think we have a lot of good a really great example of good communication. We when we decided to move in together, it really honestly is just I would I think we were both very blunt and straightforward with each other. I spent a while I kind of don't exactly remember how that conversation went, but it was essentially a sit down, of being very straightforward and like. Hey, I think you're a fantastic person. I think we both have a kind of new chapter of our lives ahead of us. And I want to live together to experience that. And that was a really direct thing. And I think the important part of that kind of conversation, knowing that somebody is on the same page as you, is to just be completely honest, like both of you. And it was pretty important to us that we were open about that communication both with like the nebulous ideas of like spending our lives for the foreseeable future together. But I think also in the sense of like the tangible things like, Hey, where do we want to live? Like, what's our budget? We had great communication about that sort of thing, too. That whole process gave me a lot of positive outlook on the decision to move in together was just seeing how strong the communication was in that whole phase.

Speaker 1 [00:15:14] Yeah. Yeah, that's great. And concretely, why do you think communication is important in a relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:15:21] Mm hmm. I mean, I think it just goes back to being there for each other. Being that person's companion. Always knowing somebody's needs. Sometimes you have to be a self advocate to your partner. But it also goes the other direction of noticing habits that somebody might not usually speak up about. Right. You know, Hey, I noticed you haven't been eating super well recently? Is everything okay? Be really upfront about that kind of thing. Because communication, it's it's a two way street, right? You know, you've got to be receptive to the things they're trying to tell you As much as you need to be open and not afraid to tell them certain things. And I think it's just that strength and the importance of communication really comes down to just knowing what the other person needs and knowing what their intentions are.

Speaker 1 [00:16:18] Yeah. I love the way that you explain that. I feel like that was, like, so well spoken. So I really appreciate that. Kind of shifting gears again, what would you say are some challenges in your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:16:35] I think we. Hmm. That is a great question. I think one of one of the challenges for for both of us is. How we are. We kind of I think, both live in this place where we like having our alone time at certain moments. But we're also currently cherishing the fact of how much time we get to spend with each other. I think that's that's definitely a difficulty. Just in terms of, you know, we want to grow as individuals, but we also want to spend so much time with this other person who is making us very happy. I think that's a that's been a challenge for us, I think. Yeah. Yeah. I mean, another one is we both kind of challenge each other to take leaps of faith with certain things. You know, I moved up to [City] here without really knowing anybody other than her and her family beforehand. And we've gone on big crazy vacations together where we kind of had a plan but got into all sorts of mishaps. And I think we we both have taken those leaps of faith pretty head on and both grown through that. But it's definitely been a challenge at times to not be afraid to break out of that comfort zone.

Speaker 1 [00:18:10] Yeah, that makes sense. And do you and your partner fight?

Speaker 2 [00:18:16] No, not necessarily. I think we definitely we disagree about certain things for sure. I think the closest we get to fighting is that we both have different strains of anxiety and that sort of thing. So sometimes one of us will be kind of worse off with that than the other is, and maybe just being a little more overwhelmed by what's going on. Not really sure how to handle the situation. And I think in that case, it's not so much fighting as it is like the general fight or flight mentality that can come with like anxiety and panic attacks and that sort of thing. So I think that's that's I hope that's a clear enough answer.

Speaker 1 [00:19:02] Yeah. Yeah, that makes sense. Um, and how do you usually resolve these kind of I guess we can call it conflicts.

Speaker 2 [00:19:11] Yeah, I think by just talking about it after the fact, once we're both in a clear headspace or we're physically out of the trouble that we're in, the stressful situation, whatever was going on, I think just to talk about it and be like, Hey, what happened? Like, are you okay? What caused that? What can we do to make those sorts of things better going forward? And that communication has been really, really good, just because I think we both want each other to be safe on like, a very fundamental level. So. We we do that kind of basic looking out for each other and then communicating about it after we're both in a safer and calmer situation.

Speaker 1 [00:19:59] Yeah. And how long would you say that these conflicts last?

Speaker 2 [00:20:05] Usually a couple of minutes or that sort of thing. Usually it comes somewhere like under some sort of weird time pressure, like, oh, we've got to we've got to get to a certain building on time or we've got to wake up at this certain time and it causes that sort of stress. So I think we're both we're both pretty sensitive to those sorts of deadlines and wanting to be punctual and that sort of thing.

Speaker 1 [00:20:32] Yeah. I mean, that's super understandable. I am. I am as well. And how often would you say these conflicts are?

Speaker 2 [00:20:42] Oh, gosh, not very often at all. Probably like every several weeks, if that usually happens when we're traveling and that sort of thing, you know, traveling is stressful.

Speaker 1 [00:20:59] Yeah. And aside from communication, what are other ways that you maintain your relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:21:06] A communication. I think actively seeking out new habits and just like identifying which ones work well. One big one for us that just started pretty recently is we both kind of decided that like doing yoga is really good for the both of us. I think we're both on our feet most of the day and we try out doing yoga together and. I mean, yeah, that kind of comes back to communication, but trying those new experiences because, you know, sometimes we'll try something like, oh, maybe we should, I don't know, decorate the room this way and it's not working. Being honest about when certain things aren't working and saying, Hey, should we try it this way instead? Or. Yeah, just. Just being upfront. Sorry. I'm trying to think because all of the things kind of boil back to communication and, you know, at least for me and my perspective on relationships is, yeah, I can kind of talk through different scenarios of like, well, when this happens, it's important to be this way. But, but really it is about just being vocal or communicating. Being there for for that person, too, in a tangible physical sense. Like helping out with doing chores. Making sure that we're both contributing equally to, like, you know, our life and quality of life. Things like cleaning and cooking and trying to both be on the ball about that sort of thing. And.

Speaker 1 [00:22:48] Yeah. Yeah, that makes sense. And I agree with you that, like, a lot of things do come back to communication. So that is a very valid response. And would you say that the relationship is good for you?

Speaker 2 [00:23:01] Hmm. Absolutely. Yeah. Yeah. I think we're both on the same page that, like. This relationship has been fantastic for the both of us. We have both, I think, up to the point of like meeting each other and living together. We both lacked a lot of stability, both in like relationship situations but also just in life in general. So being able to be that stability for one another has been a really nice aspect of the relationship.

Speaker 1 [00:23:34] Yeah, that's that's amazing. And did the relationship did the relationship change you? And if so, in what way?

Speaker 2 [00:23:44] Oh, I think it definitely has changed me. I think it's made me a more honest person just overall. Yeah, I kind of had a about this time last year. I was kind of going through a big. Pardon my French get your shit together moment in my life. And getting into a relationship like this kind of drove me to be like, okay, yeah. Like, let's, let's kind of get everything. Let's get your act together a little bit more. Like stop lying about stuff that isn't worth lying about. Just like, be a more honest person. I also think that it's made me. More of a creative person. I think her personality has rubbed off on me in that way. Like she's very much a natural artist. I've always been more of like a analytical, technical type of person. But she definitely, like, brings out that artsy side of my personality, especially by living together just in the way that we move about, like decorating our apartment and eating and those sorts of tasks that are not necessarily artful, but can be if you approach them the right way. I've noticed myself thinking about that a lot more since being together with her.

Speaker 1 [00:25:05] Yeah. And do you think your partner changed during the relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:25:10] I think so. That's not something I've spent quite as much time thinking about necessarily. Yeah. I think something she's said to me is that our relationship has turned out, making her, like, more adventurous overall because, you know, we like, we both like traveling and going in interesting, crazy places. And just going out on a limb with certain things. I think she's she's told me before that she's learned to just kind of like take those leaps of faith that we were talking about just a little bit ago, to just go out on a limb and be like, yeah, let's just go on like a four day long road and we'll be fine. It'll work out no matter what happens.

Speaker 1 [00:26:03] I love it. That's great. And do you feel safe in the relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:26:08] Yeah, absolutely.

Speaker 1 [00:26:11] Why do you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:26:14] I mean. Yeah, just in all aspects. I don't feel any kind of emotional or physical or any kind of danger. I don't think she's. I mean, I've certainly not received any of that kind of thing in the relationship at all. And it doesn't seem like the kind of situation that could turn into that sort of thing. But yeah, I feel I feel completely safe. Just I think by the nature of. You know, her being a good person.

Speaker 1 [00:26:50] Yeah, that makes sense. I like that. Okay, Awesome. Um, the next part of the interview is going to use a, like, likert scale, which is kind of like. It's kind of like. A scale with like numbers on it. And then they'll be like, strongly agree, strongly disagree, kind of like that kind of thing. So I'm going to share my screen. Can you see this.

Speaker 2 [00:27:11] Yes. I've to zoom in on it just a little bit.

Speaker 1 [00:27:17] Just slide show. This is help.

Speaker 2 [00:27:19] Yes, that helps a lot. Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:27:21] Okay. Awesome. So say I'm going to ask you a question and then you tell me what number you think you are on the scale. So the first question is, my partner usually really listens to me.

Speaker 2 [00:27:33] Um, yeah, I would say I would say an eight.

Speaker 1 [00:27:37] Okay. And why not seven or nine?

Speaker 2 [00:27:42] I don't know. I think we both have our moments of being. Poor listeners, I guess sometimes. Yeah, just. Just, you know, nobody's perfect.

Speaker 1 [00:27:57] Yeah.

Speaker 2 [00:27:58] That's yeah, I think, I think it goes for both of us. There's definitely been times where. I've screwed up in some way. And she taught me, like I communicated this to you, and we just. We just recognize it, grow up from it and move on.

Speaker 1 [00:28:16] Yeah. Yeah, that makes sense. Okay, next question. My partner usually is responsive to my needs when number do you think you would be.

Speaker 2 [00:28:26] Yeah, I'd say an eight for sure.

Speaker 1 [00:28:29] Awesome. Yeah. And then same question as before. Why not like a seven or nine?

Speaker 2 [00:28:38] I think usually the way that it goes is we're very we're very helpful for each other in lots of tangible little sentences, you know, like, Oh, you're walking to the kitchen, can you get me a to water, that sort of thing. But then also on like bigger emotional needs to. I think we. I think we both also preserve a little bit of that like. I guess, look out for number one kind of instinct a little bit sometimes. I think we both reserve that right to to be selfish every so often and just be like, Hey, I'm sorry, I'm exhausted. I just need to lay down right now. And I think. Yeah, I think that's a very honest way to go about. Relationships. So.

Speaker 1 [00:29:30] Yeah. Yeah, I love that. Yeah. And how satisfied are you with the relationship?

Speaker 2 [00:29:38] I would say completely satisfied. Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:29:43] Awesome. Awesome. And then I'm going to show you oh.

Speaker 1 [00:29:46] Okay I'm going to ask you

Speaker 1 [00:29:49] To rate your satisfaction with your relationship.

Speaker 2 [00:29:53] Yeah, I would say that it's a ten.

Speaker 1 [00:29:56] Awesome. Awesome. And why not nine? Or maybe eight.

Speaker 2 [00:30:00] Yeah. I mean, at this point in my life, I don't think there's any other kind of trait or quality in the person that I could ask for necessarily. I think. This relationship fulfills pretty much all of the things that I've could have ever been hopeful for or looked for in a relationship. So yeah, I see no reason to not be a ten.

Speaker 1 [00:30:28] That's great. Awesome. Okay. That was all from the little scale thing. Thank you so much. Oh. Oh, sorry. I got confused. So much for doing that. Yeah. Sorry. I'm trying to. Okay. So it's like an interview guide. I'm trying to figure out what's next on the interview guide. Okay, so we're almost done, but I have a few questions and. These questions might feel a bit personal or sensitive. So if you don't want to share that, it's totally okay. But we want to know more about your physical intimacy as a couple. So these days, how often do you have sex?

Speaker 2 [00:31:20] I'd say probably twice a week.

Speaker 1 [00:31:24] Yeah. And how satisfied are you with your sex life? And why would you say so?

Speaker 2 [00:31:32] I would say it's a pretty, pretty well satisfied. I think we we definitely end up with some mismatched energies every so often, but I don't think that'll happen. I don't think either of us takes it personally at all necessarily, which I think is a big part of that satisfaction is, yeah, just we're, we're just honest with each other about sex and that sort of thing, making sure each other is satisfied and that everything is good and working that we're doing so. Yeah. And then when things aren't working, we're, we're upfront about it. And I think that that leads to more satisfaction overall.

Speaker 1 [00:32:15] Yeah. Yeah. That's awesome. Okay.

Speaker 2 [00:32:21] Um.

Speaker 1 [00:32:23] So we are wrapping up or we are close to wrapping up. I want to summarize what we've conversed about in the past. Almost hour ish. Basically. You believe that communication is very valuable and that that is one of the main ingredients in a strong relationship? You don't feel like you fight very often. You have a few conflicts and but they're very minimal and not long lasting. And you're very satisfied with your relationship. Is there anything that I missed or that I got wrong or that you'd like to add to what I what we've talked about?

Speaker 2 [00:33:07] Yeah. I mean, I think I'll say that like when we were talking about with conflict and that sort of thing, it feels weird for me to think about that kind of thing as a conflict, as it is more an emotional imbalance between the two of us where one person is. I guess just harsher or a little less filtered in that sort of thing and just more tense. I don't know if I would necessarily describe it as a conflict. It's just more of an emotional imbalance.

Speaker 1 [00:33:42] Yeah. Okay. Yeah. Thank you for clarifying. Clarifying that. That makes a lot of sense. Okay.

Speaker 2 [00:33:48] Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:33:50] Awesome. So thank you so much for participating in this interview. Before we end, I want to talk to you about how we're going to handle the data. As a research project, we want to be as ethically transparent as possible.

Speaker 1 [00:34:04] To know which data sharing option you're most comfortable with. So there's two options. The first is that transcription portions can be shared, none of which can be identified to you. So the data de-identified transcript can also be read by other researchers. If you're bolder, another option is that the whole transcript can be shared. It will be removed, of sensitive and overly identifying details, so it will be anonymized. Although in this option there is a minimal chance that someone who knows you or works with you can put together the details in the transcript and narrow down who among the people they know that they believe it is. Although again, no sensitive information will be shared. So of these two options, which are you more comfortable with?

Speaker 2 [00:34:50] Yeah, I'm fine with the full transcript. I'm comfortable with that, with the sensitive information being removed.

Speaker 1 [00:34:58] Okay, Awesome. Sounds good. And then one more thing. The way that we are running the study. Sorry, I'm getting so many messages. The way that we are running the study is through snowball sampling, which basically means that we ask our interviewees if they know anyone else who might be interested or if they know anyone else who can recommend other people who would be interested in being interviewed. Right now we are looking for interviewees who are in LGBTQ relationships that are have lower satisfaction. So people who like like LGBTQ couples or relationships that might argue a lie or just just generally seem more unhappy in the relationship. If you happen to know anyone of this demographic, please let me know. I will send you a follow up text message. So that's what I'll be like in writing.

Speaker 2 [00:35:59] Okay.

Speaker 1 [00:35:59] So yeah, because I know this like a lot to, like process like randomly, but yeah, I will write it to you. And if you don't know anyone or not meet anyone, that is totally okay. But that's just the way that we are running the study.

Speaker 2 [00:36:11] Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:36:11] Pretty awesome. Do you have any more questions for me? Anything else you would like to add?

Speaker 2 [00:36:19] No, I think I'm all set. Thank you so much for reaching out to set up. This interview has been a lot of fun.

Speaker 1 [00:36:26] Also, I'm glad you enjoyed it. Thank you so much for participating. It's been pretty difficult to get people to participate, so I really do appreciate it.

Speaker 2 [00:36:34] That's rough. Yeah, [topic] is hard. I wish you the best of luck.

Speaker 1 [00:36:40] Yeah, it's research is definitely a difficult, a difficult thing. Yeah. Are you. Are you, like, a [topic] person? I'm just curious.

Speaker 2 [00:36:51] I definitely have a very big passing interest in [topic]. There is a YouTube channel or two that I follow that cover topics about, like fraud in [topic], like famous cases of fraud and misconduct in [topic]. So I've been exposed to, like, some information about what goes on in the the back end of research and how grueling it can be. But I think I've. I studied [degree program] in college personally. I was in a [degree] program. But I think I have a really big appreciation for how [topic] is done. I'm really fascinated by the process, and I understand, like, how difficult and grueling it can be. So.

Speaker 1 [00:37:37] Yeah. The fraud thing, like the fraud [topic] thing is so interesting, though. I would love to hear more about that because it's like I've never like, I've always considered like [topic] to be like the all, like the all knowing and like the most honest. Yeah. Like any you don't. I mean, like, I was like, oh, it's so honest because like scientists, you know, it can't be, can't be dishonest. But I think it's so interesting.

Speaker 2 [00:37:58] if you're interested. The channel that I mostly watch is called[Name]. But it's really fantastically animated. They've done videos covering I trying to think the story of the guy who tried to fake an element discovery named [Name]. I wasn't enough. Shoot. There was no [Name]. [Name] was the guy who almost faked his way to a Nobel Prize and had his Ph.D. stripped from him because he was faking all this research into, like, organic crystals. Yeah. And there was another guy who tried to fake an element discovery that he was working for for one of the big colliders at the time is a lot of really cool. Cool. It's mostly about like [topic] and that sort of thing, which has had a weird number of like [topic] fraud cases. So it's pretty cool stuff.

Speaker 1 [00:39:01] Yeah, that is super cool. I'll definitely check that out. That's super fascinating. I love watching like YouTube videos are like slightly also like, informative, if that makes sense. Because I'm like, I'm, I'm learning.

Speaker 2 [00:39:13] How are you learning? I'm blossoming by watching video essays about [Game Name].

Speaker 1 [00:39:17] Yeah, exactly. Like I was like, Oh my gosh, yeah, I'm just learning. I'm like educational knowledge. I other people would just, like, watch random things on YouTube. I'm, I'm superior. I'm not like that. But like, yeah.

Speaker 2 [00:39:29] I'm not like other girls. I'm worse.

Speaker 1 [00:39:33] I'm worse. But it's so me I need to put that my Instagram bio. I'm not like other girls, I'm worse. Okay. Awesome. Well, I will let you go. Or unless you want to say lot of things, but I don't want to keep you here.

Speaker 2 [00:39:49] I think it's a little bit late here. We're in [timezone] time.

Speaker 1 [00:39:54] Yes, I figured. [timezone] time. That's like.

Speaker 2 [00:39:57] It's 10:00 right now.

Speaker 1 [00:40:00] But it's kind of late, so. Yeah, it's.

Speaker 2 [00:40:02] Not too bad. My, I have a midweek weekend, so I've just kind of been a bum all day. Got it? Got it.

Speaker 1 [00:40:10] That's kind of cool, though. A midweek weekend?

Speaker 2 [00:40:13] Yeah, we're. We're off Tuesday. Wednesday, because, I mean, we're a [company name] in a relatively small area that mostly works with, like, most of our customers are tourists. So it just makes sense to be closed for Tuesday, Wednesday.

Speaker 1 [00:40:30] Yeah, that does make sense. Yeah.

Speaker 1 [00:40:37] Well, it was really nice chatting with you. Thank you so much again for doing this. I really appreciate it. Yeah, I.

Speaker 2 [00:40:43] Will. I will reach out if I know anyone else who might be interested in this study for sure.

Speaker 1 [00:40:49] Okay. Awesome. Awesome. Thank you so much. Yeah, I'll. I'll message you so you can have it more like in writing and know what you're talking about, but. Yeah. Okay. Awesome. Thank you so much.

Speaker 2 [00:40:59] Thank you so much. Thank you. Bye.
